Gee Jack!

All-American Boy's sidekick still has a lot of 'ham,' even after a 30-year legal career

by JOHN MAES

Saturday

There's still a trace of the old actor in Judge John Gannon.

Even as the associate judge lectures traffic violations and shoplifters from the bench of the suburban 3rd District Cook County Circuit Court in his high pitched, oratorical voice, he seems to be behind the radio microphone once again, script in hand.

Gannon, now 58, was the voice of Billy Fairfield on the Jack Armstrong show, a radio classic of the 1930s and 40s.

FOR 13 YEARS, three months and three days, he played the naive but loyal sidekick to radio's "All-American Boy" before leaving in 1946 to pursue his legal career.

Still, almost 30 years after quitting the role, he sais he can still deliver his famous line, "Gee, Jack, I never thought of that," in much the same childlike, whining way he did back when radio was king.

And he admits some of the old theatrical ham lives in him and shows — even in the courtroom.

"I've never been able to divorce the theater from the courtroom," he says. "Because I have respect for the legitimate theater and a deeper and abiding respect for the courtroom."

"THERE'S NO MORE such a thing as an ex-actor than there's an ex-Marine or an ex-Texan."

A trial has its "theatrical aspects," he says, "and it's a one shot performance. Especially if you're a prosecutor before a jury and you only get one chance to sell your product."

It was 1933 when Gannon, then high school age, was working as a downtown Chicago office boy and heard WBBM radio was conducting auditions for parts of the Jack Armstrong cast.

Even though it was a general audition for various parts in the cast, Gannon's high-pitched "juvenile" voice won him the part of Billy.

AND THEY KNEW THE show was a hit. Stores in the areas where the show was broadcast were continually selling out their supplies of Wheaties, Gannon said, saying in other areas, the sponsor's cereal moved less quickly.

During his years as Billy, Gannon outlasted several actors who played Jack, including James Ameche, brother of radio and movie star Don Ameche.

For his toils, Gannon made $50, a nice wage in the 1930s for three

TODAY, GANNON, now 58 says there's still a little of the old actor in him even as he presides over Northwest suburban courts. "I've never been able to divorce the theater from the courtroom."

$2.25 million asked

Library officials optimistic on vote

Officials of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library are expressing quiet optimism for passage of the $2.25 million expansion referendum Feb. 28.

The referendum would cost the average citizen, with a house assessed at $10,000, an additional $8 per year for the next 20 years.

Richard Frisbie, president of the library board, said the bond issue stands a better chance of getting approval in the February vote than it had last April when it was defeated.

"This time it's a simpler issue. People can grasp it more easily," Frisbie said.

THE VOTERS will be asked to approve expansion of the library across Fremont Street onto land once set aside for a village cultural center. The site is now a commuter parking lot.

Remodeling of the existing library, expanded parking facilities and new library equipment also are part of the referendum.

Dropped from the ballot were proposals for a tax rate increase and plans for an auditorium in the expanded library. The auditorium and rate hike were voted down last April.

However, voters approved the purchase of $720,000 for new books and materials in the past election. The books cannot be purchased until there is adequate shelf space.

FRISBIE SAID the crowded April ballot tended to confuse the issues in the election. Not only was the library proposal up for consideration, but a hotly contested village board race and park district referendum were also competing for citizen attention and approval.

"The spring referendum was a monstrosity because it was so complicated," Frisbie said.

He said the February referendum will build on the momentum generated for the vote 10 months ago.

A slide presentation and promotional program by Frisbie and other supporters of the referendum is being given "where ever they will let us on the program," Frisbie said.

HE SAID HE is being questioned about the referendum, but the questioning has not been in a hostile vein or is there evidence of organized opposition.

"What are they going to be against? Almost everyone has a library card. For organized opposition they need a rallying point. Even now, we are having to put books on the floor instead of the shelf," he said.

A loosely knit group of 22 library supporters has taken the message to PTAs, club meetings in the library and other organizations to build a base for a victory later this month.

"The group is growing all the time. People in it are putting the arm on their friends," he said.

THE LIBRARY board has said the expansion of the library, one of the busiest in the state, would meet the community's needs for the next five to 10 years.

The referendum would allocate $1.6 million for the building expansion, $50,000 for remodeling the present building, $55,000 for parking lot modifications and $265,000 for new equipment.

The remaining portion of the funds would go toward finance charges and architects' fees. A $96,000 contingency Fund is included in the total amount.

Patty to testify Monday, defense attorney predicts

by JACK V. FOX

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst is likely to take the stand Monday and make her first public statement on events following her kidnaping in 1974, one of her lawyers said Friday.

Albert Johnson, the partner of chief defense counsel F. Lee Bailey, told reporters there is "a good chance" the newspaper heiress will testify at a hearing on the admissibility of evidence about incidents which occurred after the April 15, 1974, bank robbery for which she is standing trial.

The defense is trying to prevent introduction of a tape recording she made three days after the holdup and of evidence on a Los Angeles shootout the following month.

She has never discussed publicly any of the events between her kidnaping by Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists and her capture by the FBI last September following 19 months underground.

U.S. DISTRICT Judge Oliver J. Carter scheduled the hearing, which will be held with the jury out of the courtroom, for 9:30 a.m. Monday.

In Friday's court action, Bailey sought to discredit a vital government witness who told a federal jury Miss Hearst pointed a gun at him, cursed him and ordered him to lie down on the floor during a bank robbery.

James Norton, a hospital therapist who was at a teller's cage when the robbery began, stuck to his story that the auburn-haired defendant, who was sitting in court, definitely was the woman who threatened to "blow my head off."

His testimony was a key foundation to the prosecution contention Miss Hearst took an active and voluntary role in the bank robbery and was not acting out of fear of the three other women and one black man who invaded the bank.

More quakes hit Guatemala; at least 5,000 feared dead

by PAUL WYATT

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI — Two more earthquakes struck Guatemala Friday, adding to the death and destruction wrought by Wednesday's catastrophic tremblor that took 5,000 to 6,000 lives, injured thousands and left 200,000 persons homeless.

Unofficial — and unconfirmed — reports in the capital said the death toll might be as high as 14,000 in the early quake, but officials discounted them. President Kjell Laugerud Gareia told UPI at 7:30 p.m. EST Friday that "no less than 5,000 persons" died in the Wednesday quake.

One quake, which hit the country Friday morning, was mild, but a second one at 12:20 p.m. registered 5.6 on the Richter intensity scale — only slightly less than the cataclysm of Wednesday. There was no immediate report of casualties in the latest quake, which once again sent panic-stricken residents fleeing into the streets.

"I NOW CALCULATE that no less than 5,000 persons died in Wednesay's quake," the president said at La Aurora airport where he was inspecting hangars housing relief supplies arriving from the United States and Latin American countries in a non-stop aerial bridge.

"The damage is just too much," he said. "I never imagined it would be so grave."

Friday's quakes caused landslides on the mountains around the capital

Area woman wins $100,000 in lottery

Lillian Strazalka, 942 N. Norman Ln., Wheeling, found herself $100,000 richer Friday night. The unemployed factory worker won the jackpot in the Illinois State Lottery's weekly drawing. The 54-year-old woman had been looking for a job for 11 months. She said 12 of her relatives were in Chicago to see if she won. "I'm going to take everyone to dinner at McDonald's to celebrate," she said, after being handed the winner's check. "Then I'm going to take my mother, who is 85, on a trip to California."

Woman falls seven stories

A 44-year-old woman remained in serious to critical condition Friday after falling seven stories from her apartment in the Valley Lake apartments, Schaumburg. The woman, Olga J. Roy, was being kept in the intensive care unit of Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, a hospital spokesman said. Police said the woman, 1427 Valley Lake Dr., fell from her apartment window into a three-foot snowbank about 8 p.m. Thursday. Authorities were investigating.

Furnace probe reopened

Officials in Elk Grove Village have been asked to reopen an investigation into faulty home furnaces in the village. Elk Grove resident Michael Smith, a Democratic candidate for the State Senate said Friday he telegrammed Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek asking the village to help force the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission to reinvestigate the matter. Smith said he is making the request because he learned there has been no "official release" of a previous report on furnace problems in an estimated 1,700 local homes built between 1962 and 1971 by Centex Corp.

Meadows residents polled

Rolling Meadows residents favor a strong city manager-council form of government with the present 10-man city council, a preliminary poll shows. The city council is expected to vote Tuesday on whether to conduct a referendum to broaden the powers of the city manager and ask residents if they wish to retain the present council makeup.

Thompson, Cooper before GOP groups

Two disagree on ERA, abortion

Republican gubernatorial candidates James Thompson and Richard Cooper took opposite positions Friday night on the emotional issues of abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

However, the two, speaking before a candidates' forum sponsored by the Elk Grove and Palatine Township Republican organizations, found broad areas of agreement on their criticisms of Gov. Daniel Walker's financial management of the state.

On ERA Cooper, a Winnetka businessman, said he opposes it because "I don't believe women should give up some of the protection they have."

Cooper said he supports equal rights for women but, "I don't think the ERA and equal rights are the same thing."

COOPER ALSO said he is opposed to abortion on "moral grounds" and said that because his wife is pregnant, "I don't even really like to think about it," he said.

Thompson told the audience that neither the equal rights amendment nor the abortion issue involve the governor because the ERA must be approved by the legislature. Any constitutional amendment overturning the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion will involve only Congress and the legislature.

However, Thompson said he personally supports the Equal Rights Amendment and opposes any attempt to change the Constitution to out-law abortion.

"I hope no one will vote against me because of my stands on issues the governor has nothing to do with," he said.

BOTH THOMPSON and Cooper said they believe state government must be reorganized in order to make it more efficient. Both agreed that budget cuts will be needed to avoid a tax increase.

Thompson said "I realize it's very popular now to be a fiscal conservative. Our present governor has even convinced some of our Republican friends that he is a fiscal conservative."

However, Thompson said Walker has "doubled the budget in three years and when I ask if government is twice as good as three years ago, I don't find any positive responses."

Thompson said, "We must either cut spending or raise taxes and anyone who tells you anything else is lying."

COOPER SAID he will bring his business expertise to government to improve its financial condition. "I am the only candidate who has said there will not be a tax increase, and I have put together programs to avoid that."

Cooper said he wants to cut "fat" from the budget, "I'm not the only man who can do the job — there are probably 50 or 100 guys who could be the best governor we've ever had — but they're not running, I am."

Cooper said, "I'm the little efficiency expert who's running for governor."

Howlett to resign Sun Steel post

by STEVE BROWN

One week after the controversy surrounding Sec. of State Michael Howlett's $15,000 a year outside job, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate said he will resign the post next week.

Howlett and his aides began telling reporters he will resign the post and hold a press conference next week to disclose his finances.

All segments of the Howlett camp said the resignation did not amount to an admission that Howlett was involved in a conflict of interest because he held a position with the Sun Steel Co., Chicago Heights.

Howlett said he decided to resign because of his concern for the Kaplan family, which owns 55 per cent of Sun Steel.

WHILE HOWLETT plans to resign and disclose his finances, an aide to Illinois Atty. General William Scott said Friday there were no plans to end the investigation into whether Howlett must return the $225,000 he earned from the job since 1960.

Scott said the investigation is to determine if there is any basis to sue Howlett for the funds.

"If there is nothing there, then he deserves to be cleared.

Scott has named former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Charles H. Davis of Rockford to look into the matter.

Howlett aides said Howlett would like the investigation completed quickly so that he could get back to the main issue of the campaign which Howlett said is the mismanagement of state government by the Walker administration.

Stocks profit taking puts market at new-year low

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices plunged Friday for the second consecutive day in diminished trading on the New York Stock Exchange as traders cashed in on new year rally profits.

The Dow Jones industrial average, an 11.81-point loster Thursday, fell another 9.91 points to 954.90, giving it a loss for the week of 20.38 points, the worst setback since it fell 41.87 points the week ended Dec. 5, 1975. The blue-chip average had gained 124.21 points in the new year rally prior to Thursday.

A brief buying surge trimmed losses in the early afternoon, but this fizzled in the face of profit taking, which carried over from Thursday. Most analysts said this was normal in light of the market's January gains.

STANDARD & POOR'S 500-stock indes fell 0.93 to 99.46 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 29 cents. Declines routed advances, 1,005 to 528, among the 1,910 issues crossing the tape.

The volume of 27,360,000 shares was down from the 33,780,000 traded Thursday. It brought the week's total to 157,488,660 shares, the fourth busiest in NYSE history.

Analysts said Wall Street's major concern right now is that short-term interest rates might have leveled off after a four-month decline. The Federal Reserve Board has lowered its minimum money supply growth rate target a half point to 4½ per cent, while leaving the maximum at 7½ per cent. Many observers were confused by the action.

Late Thursday, the Fed reported the nation's money supply fell by $400 million in the latest reporting week. It also reported loan demand at New York's leading banks increased by $27 million.

SOME INVESTORS were encouraged by the Labor Department report January's unemployment rate dropped .5 per cent to 7.8 per cent from 8.3 per cent in Dec. the largest monthly decline since December, 1959.

Prices closed lower in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex common share decreased by seven cents. Volume totaled 3,080,000 shares, compared to 4,860,000 traded Thursday.

On the Chicago Board Options Exchange, 100,657 contracts changed hands, compared to 133,322 traded Thursday.

Holy Family staff uses intricate heart process

A sophisticated heart procedure that previously had not been performed at a Northwest suburban hospital was accomplished at Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, after a patient suffered a massive coronary attack.

A medical device called an intra-aortic balloon was inserted into the patient by Dr. K. E. Patel, a cardiovascular surgeon on Holy Family's staff, to assist a 46-year-old Des Plaines man's failing heart.

A pump inflates and deflates the balloon in the aorta at the same speed as the patient's heart beat, bolstering the body's blood pumping ability.

The man, reported in critical condition earlier this week, suffered a heart attack while shoveling show Jan. 25. When he failed to respond to medication, doctors decided to insert the intra-aortic balloon.

"This treatment gives the patient's heart needed rest while maintaining proper blood pressure and is designed to improve his condition," said Dr. Robert Bielinski, an internist at Holy Family and an attending physician during the procedure.

The patient, who hospital officials did not identify, is expected to remain on the balloon a minimum of several more days as the pressure being exerted through the ballon is gradually decreased, doctors said.

Paddock, Malone litigation settled

Stuart R. Paddock Jr., president of The Paddock Corp., Friday announced that all litigation between the corporation and John R. Malone, a former official and stockholder, has been settled and dismissed. The settlement and dismissals include all of the claims asserted by Malone against the corporation and various present and former officers and directors, and also all of the claims asserted against Malone by the corporation and certain of its officers and directors.

Paddock stated that an agreement of amicable relations has been entered into and that it is the intention that all parties will adhere to the spirit of that agreement in the future.

Correction

The Monday edition of the Herald incorrectly reported State Rep. Leo LaFleur, R-Bloomingdale, had positions on two government payrolls.

The information was obtained from the Coalition for Political Honesty, an ad hoc group seeking to put three constitutional amendments on the ballot in November which outlaw "double dipping" the practice of being on more than one government payroll simultaneously.

LaFleur said he has never been a double dipper. A Coalition spokesman, Patrick Quinn said confusion over LaFleur's ethics statement caused the error. He said LaFleur will be sent a letter of apology and his name will be removed from the list.

The Herald regrets the error.

Lockheed chief admits bribing foreign officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. disclosed Friday his company paid millions of dollars in bribes and fees to government officials in Italy, the Netherlands and Japan to boost aircraft sales.

President A. C. Kotchian also said Lockheed planned to buy influence with the Turkish government, but he denied any money had been paid to British officials and said he could not confirm reports of payoffs to West German politicians.

At hearings of the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations, Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Frank Church, D-Idaho, grilled Kotchian relentlessly on the governmental payoff issue and demanded he name names and spell out details.

Reluctantly, he identified a few middlemen — but none of the government officials —involved in some of the transactions.

Among the major disclosures brought out in the tense, packed hearing room:

• More than $1.5 million paid by Lockheed "to government officials in Italy" went to the Christian Democrat party of then-Defense Minister Luigi Gui in early 1970 to help promote the halting Lockheed C130 sales program.

• Lockheed paid about $1 million to an unidentified high ranking Dutch government official in 1961 to promote sales of F104 jetfighters and P2V antisubmarine planes to the Netherlands, plus another $100,000 more recently to the same official. Reports from Europe have alleged the official is Prince Bernhard, inspector general of the Dutch armed forces.

• The $100,000 Lockheed paid to Hiroshi Itoh of Japan's Marubeni Trading Company was in fact destined for an unidentified Japanese government official.

On Wednesday, the subcommittee released Lockheed documents showing the firm had paid at least $15 million in bribes and questionable fees to foreign lobbyists since the late 1950s. Friday's questioning of Kotchian focused on efforts to pay off government officials themselves.

Nixon influence cited in 'deal'

TOKYO (UPI) — An opposition member of parliament Friday accused former President Richard M. Nixon of using his influence while in the White House to get Japans' Airways to buy Lockheed L1011 jetliners instead of McDonnell-Douglas DC10s.

The charge was made by Yanosuke Narazaki, a Socialist Diet parliament member who specializes in defense problems.

It was denied by All Nippon Airways President Tokuji Wakasa who said the decision to buy the Lockheed plane was purely technical, and was not influenced by politics.

Narazaki told the budget committee of the Diet Nixon intervened in favor of Lockheed during the September, 1972, summit meeting with former Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka in Hawaii partly because Lockheed was financially distressed, and partly because of close association with Lockheed executives.

VICTIMS OF THE earthquake in Guatemala City, Guatemala were struck with an after shock Friday as survivors went about searching for bodies of loved ones and belongings.

No White House involvement

Nixon to visit China soon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon, accompanied by his wife Pat, will return to China later this month to mark the anniversary of his breakthrough diplomatic mission in 1972, it was announced Friday.

"Oh, it's definitely true," said Jack Brennan, Nixon's former military aide, when asked to confirm the initial announcement of the visit by the New China News Agency in Peking.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Nixon telephoned President Ford late Thursday afternoon to tell him, during a 16-minute conversation that he had accepted an invitation from Chinese leaders to revisit Peking starting Feb. 21.

But Nessen stressed, "There is no significance attached to the trip by the White House.

"IT IS NOT expected to have an impact on the United States — Chinese relations or on domestic politics. It was something arranged by the former president and the Chinese. It's a private visit of a private citizen and no White House involvement."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, talking with reporters on Capitol Hill, gave essentially the same assessment: "The decision was President Nixon's at the invitation of the People's Republic of China and did not involve the government of the United States."

But Kissinger also said, "I think Peking is trying to underline the importance it attaches to its relations with the United States. President Nixon had an historic role in the achievement of opening up China. The Nixon visit . . . will symbolize the relations we hope to continue to have."

NESSEN SAID Ford told Nixon in the telephone talk he was "encouraged" that the former president's health had improved sufficiently to make the trip, and asked him to convey "his best wishes" to Chinese leaders with whom he met on his own visit to Peking late last year.

Nessen said the Chinese will send a plane to the El Toro Marine air base near Nixon's home here to pick up the former president and his party. Aside from the Feb. 21 arrival date, there was no immediate announcement of the schedule for the trip.

The Peking news agency said Nixon and his wife "have accepted the invitation with pleasure. The Chinese side and former President Nixon both consider that a revisit to China by him will be appropriate."

Since he resigned Aug. 9, 1974, Nixon has stayed in touch with Chairman Mao Tse-tung. Nixon's daughter Julie Eisenhower and her husband David visited China several weeks ago, taking with them a letter from Nixon and returning with a message to him from Mao.

Patty Hearst may testify Monday

mother, with whom he has lived for 11 years, was sitting outside the bank in a car and he afterwards found her "quite visibly shaken" by the robbery and the gunfire.

Under cross examination by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, Norton said he had talked with defense investigator John McNally and that his mother also had spoken with McNally.

"Did you tell Mr. McNally that you believed Patty is guilty and that nothing could convince you otherwise?" Bailey asked.

"No I did not," Norton said. "I told him I had an open mind."

"Did you hear your mother tell Mr. McNally, "I hope they stick it to her. Patty knew all along she was going to be kidnaped?' "

"NO, I DID NOT hear her say that. Mr. McNally talked with me at my place of business and he talked with my mother at our home when I was not present.

"Did you tell him that you and your mother had talked a good deal about Miss Hearst's predicament?"

"Yes, I did. I know how my mother feels about it."

Norton said he was badly frightened by the experience in which he lay face down on the floor after "looking down the barrel of a gun," then heard shots and glass breaking.

The witness said he heard a man later identified as Donald DeFreeze shout out: "This is the SLA. Get on the floor. We're not kidding. This is Patty Hearst."

NORTON SAID HE left that afternoon on a long-planned vacation to Hawaii without telling authorities about what he knew of the holdup.

The next day in his hotel in Honolulu, Norton said, he picked up a paper and read an account of the robbery and saw a picture of Miss Hearst in the bank lobby on the front page and immediately recognized her as the woman who threatened him.

city, sending great clouds of brown dust into the air. Buildings already on the verge of collapsing caved in.

About 20 houses at La trinidad Barrio slid into a deep gorge. Firemen said they did not know immediately if anyone was in the houses.

At the Ritz Continental Hotel in downtown Guatemala City, where most foreign correspondents were lodged, new cracks opened in the walls, the electricity went out and water stopped coming out of the faucets.

DOUG ROBERTS, UPI photographer, who was developing photos, said "I kept waiting for the temblor to end. Then I realized that it was more serious when I saw fixer sloshing out of the chemical tray. Then the lights went out."

A middle-aged American tourist without his shirt hurried down six flights of stairs to the hotel lobby, whining all the way.

Shopkeepers closed up shop again. Ambulances began wailing through the street. Pieces of concrete fell into the streets, and traffic came to a standstill.

Women on the streets gathered up their children and ran to the middle of the streets with frightened looks on their faces. Some sobbed quietly.

At the national communications tower, where this correspondent was preparing a dispatch, about 50 people waiting to send telegrams dashed for the doors.

Telephone and telex operators flew down the stairs from the upper floors.

ONE GIRL WHO fainted was carried. Another girl in the lobby of the communications tower became hysterical and began shaking violently.

Chunks of plaster littered the corridor of the U.S. Embassy, a new building opened in August of 1974. The embassy's Guatemalan perfonnel were sent home.

International telephone communications were restored a few hours later. The operators sat in the bed of a small pickup truck with three handsets outside the building. About 50 people crowded around the truck waiting to send messages.

Four strands of wire ran out of the building to the truck. Telephone repairmen slept nearby on the ground. The British ambassador waited while a foreign correspondent filed his report.

PRISONERS FROM the downtown jail were herded into trucks when the new quake split some of the jail's walls. A policeman said they were being transferred to jails in suburban areas.

In the la Trinidad slum area, throngs of people walked along the dusty roads carrying personal belongings on their backs, heads and in wheelbarrows. Trucks were also being loaded with furniture.

At the Red Cross building, 5,000 bottles of medicine were destroyed when a storage shelf crashed to the ground, according to Dr. Gonzalo Vargas, a Red Cross physician.

Sirica off critical list

Watergate Judge John J. Sirica was taken off the critical list Friday evening and doctors said his condition following a near-fatal heart attack Thursday was "much improved." Sirica was shifted to the "serious" list in late afternoon by doctors at George Washington University Medical Center's coronary care unit. "He is progressing as well as we can expect," said Dr. Joel Gorfinkel, associate director of the unit, in a medical bulletin. The bulletin said Sirica was "alert and resting comfortable at this time." Another bulletin was to be issued Saturday morning.

Sioux ask Congress for payments

A group of Sioux Indians whose ancestors died in the 1890 massacre at Wounded Knee, S.D., asked Congress Friday to approve legislation making small payments to survivors so the government finally admits a wrong was done. The $3,000 that would be paid to the families of the 146 Sioux men, women and children killed or wounded in the attack at Wounded Knee is "only a token of what we lost," said Simon Looking Elk of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. "We lost far more. The seeds of a great band of people were lost in that battle." Although the money won't rectify Wounded Knee, he said it will help the Indians "seek justice. We say a wrong has been committed, and we would like for the government to say — at least in this instance — that something wrong was done and justice will be brought forth."

Unemployment rate drops

The nation's unemployment rate last month took its sharpest drop in 15 years as businesses rehired nearly a half million workers, the Labor Department reported Friday. Unemployment fell from 8.3 per cent in December to 7.8 per cent in January, the department's report said. The number of unemployed Americans in the nonfarm sector dropped by 450,000 in January to a total of 7.3 million, with 78.1 million persons on payrolls during the month. The department said employment gains were registered for all categories of the American work force except teen-agers, whose jobless rate increased by 0.3 per cent o 19.9 per cent.

U.S. plane crashes, six missing

A U.S. C135 tanker plane with a crew of six crashed in flames Friday night 15 miles norhheast of its suburban Madrid base, U.S. officials said. They said the plane was based at Torrejon Air Base, one of four Spanish military bases used by American forces. There were no reports of survivors. The names of the U.S. crew members were not immediately released. Rescue teams from Torrejon rushed to the scene. The U.S. officials said the crash occurred about 8:30 p.m. in a deserted area near the Guadlajara Mountains. Some reports said the plane was preparing to land.

State unemployment rate up

Unemployment in Illinois rose from 9 to 9.4 per cent in January with worsening conditions reported in six downstate labor areas, the Department of Labor reported Friday. The six-county Chicago area reported an improvement with 6,800 fewer persons filing unemployment claims. But unemployment figures in Bloomington-Normal, Champaign-Urbana, the Quad Cities, Peoria, Rockford and Springfield all showed increases in the number of jobless residents. The total unemployed count for the state was 472,800, a 35,000 increase over the December figure.

Dixon office low on minorities: Demuzio

State Sen. Vince Demuzio said Friday his Democratic foe for secretary of state, state Treasurer Alan J. Dixon, has failed to hire enough minority workers. Demuzio charged Monday Dixon has only two minority workers among 89 employes. Dixon said the actual numbers are six blacks and 46 women. "Dixon side-stepped the issue," Demuzio said in Friday's news release. "Whether he has employed two persons or six persons is irrelevant. Neither is acceptable. Dixon has not made any real attempt to achieve fair and equal employment in his office."

shows a day, six days a week. When not on the air, he finished high school, college and attended Loyola University Law School.

General Mills, the sponsor, gave Gannon a watch as a Christmas gift in 1935. He wears it to this day.

BUT AFTER MORE than two years in the Army and passing the bar exam, Gannon said he realized there was little room for a "Johnny one-note" in show business and turned to a law practice.

"Other people could double and play other parts, but I never had that talent. I did one thing with a modicum of talent but the horizon was rather limited for me."

"Television was coming along and here I was. I'm 29 years of age and I'm playing 15-year-olds on the radio," he said. "Don't forget, in radio we did it with the vocal cords."

"All the radio programs after World War II moved to New York or Los Angeles and I would have had to go. In the meantime, I had this license to practice law that I never used.

BUT HE LOVED THE radio. "We worked as a unit. If the soundman missed a cue because something didn't work, we could ad-lib and cover for him until he got the record back on the turntable or slammed the door right or something," he said.

Since the end of his radio days, Gannon became an assistant state's attorney in 1960 and associate Circuit Court judge in 1971. A former Jack Armstrong, Charles Flynn, also studied law but later turned to the advertising business, Gannon said.

With exception of Sara Jane Wells, who played Betty Fairfield and is now in public relations with the Chicago Historical Society, Gannon hardly sees the old cast members anymore. Some continued in show business and "went Hollywood."

But it doesn't all seem that far away. Sometimes the courtroom furnishes all the comforts of the studio. "It just happens the theater and courtroom are similar," he says. "The functions are different."

Residents to decide Monday

Lynnwood to fight parks annex?

Residents of the Lynnwood subdivision will decide Monday whether they will continue their fight to stay out of the Arlington Heights Park District.

Homeowners in the unincorporated area northwest of the village filed suit to block a forced annexation to the park district, but Circuit Court Judge Edward Healy ruled in favor of the park district Tuesday.

Peter Finnberg, a spokesman for the homeowners, said no decision has been reached on whether Healy's ruling will be appealed. A meeting of the group is scheduled for Monday night, he said.

IF THE HOMEOWNERS do not file an appeal within 30 days, Healy's decision will stand.

In 1974 the park board acted upon a recently enacted state law and annexed the area despite strong opposition from the residents.

The law authorized park districts to annex land bounded by park property on three sides and a body of water, railroad or highway on the fourth.

Area residents charged the district was stretching the law to unacceptable limits by calling North Chicago Avenue a "highway" to meet the language of the law.

"I'M TOTALLY disappointed," Finberg said of Healy's decision. "I definitely thought North Chicago Avenue was not a highway. But apparently the judge and I didn't see eye-to-eye on that. That's my personal reaction. I'm sure others in the area feel the same way."

Park officials and attorneys hailed Healy's ruling as a vindication of their policies and procedures.

Other areas subjected to the involuntary annexations had threatened to file suit as did the Lynnwood group.

Park Pres. Lloyd Meyer said of the ruling, "Nnow that we know we are right, we can carry on without that hanging over our head."

The park board has maintained its actions have been prompted by a concern for the entire district.

"WE HAVE TO THINK of the district as a whole, and not just a small section of it," Meyer said.

The district has been annexing land to "even out" the saw-toothed borders and to increase its tax base. Commissioners have said the residents outside the district have been using the facilities wihout contributing to their upkeep through payment of park taxes.

The annexation struggle with the Lynnwood group often has been heated. The homeowners, at one point, called for a probe by the Cook County State's Attorney of the district's annexation methods.

Bicentennial commission asks $7,200 from village

The Arlington Heights Bicentennial Commission will ask the village for $7,200 when hearings on the 1976 budget begin next week.

Requests from the Bicentennial Commission at last year's budget hearings totaled almost $90,000 but were eventually cut to $2,500.

Dwight F. Walton, chairman of the commission, said Thursday the lower request this year is because of elimination of some "major projects" and the receipt of donations from businesses and organizations.

"We've changed tactics a little bit this year," Walton said. "Last year we proposed two major long-term projects — Priairie Farm and a recreation area at Lake Arlington. Both have been delayed so the Bicentennial Commission has stripped them from our project list.

"Also, last year we hadn't tapped private enterprises and individuals for funds. We've been very fortunate to get individuals and organizations to underwrite such activities as the July 3 parade and the Wagon Train that will stop at Arlington Park," Walton said.

The commission is asking for village funds to pay partially the costs of five projects: the Fourth of July fireworks display, $1,500; the mini-park program, $2,000; historical displays at the historical society, $2,500; and a Town Meeting, $600. A request will also be made for $600 to cover miscellaneous expenses or an additional project.

Criminal code update bill lacking

World of religion

by David E. Anderson

S.1, a bill being considered in the Senate, is a long overdue attempt to bring the nation's criminal code up to date.

It also is, to some, a spectre of suppression that would in its 500 pages undermine citizens' most fundamental liberties even as the nation celebrates its Bicentennial.

An interreligious conference, called under auspices of the Church of Scientology, recently took a look at S.1 and found it wanting.

"The Declaration of Independence asserts that citizens of the United States have been endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights," Jesuit lawyer Daniel Sheehan told the conference. S.1 is "an effort to take those rights away by simple legislative action.

"This effort will not be tolerated by the U.S. religious community," said Sheehan.

While his prediction remains to be proved, the conference did decide to undertake an effort to have pastors study S.1 and set Feb. 22 as a day when they hoped clergymen would tell congregations about it in an effort to get a public debate started over the bill.

Both liberals and conservatives believe legislation to update the nation's criminal justice procedures is long overdue.

But critics point to these features of the bill:

• It would reinstitute a mandatory death penalty for some crimes.

• It would expand areas where legal wiretapping is allowed.

• Permit conviction of defendants for committing crimes they were inducted to commit by police agents.

• And create what has been called an "official secrets act" under which Daniel Ellsberg, New York Times officials and others involved in the Pentagon papers leak could have been imprisoned. Some sections of the secrecy provisions provide life imprisonment or the death penalty for communicating "national defense information" during a "national defense emergency" such as the Vietnam war.

What does all this have to do with the religious community? Sheehan uses history for his answer.

"Almost all of the Bill of Rights as it comes down to us today had its origins in the Christian community and its struggles against the monarchy of Europe," he says.

These rights have at their base the assertion that state authority is limited, an essential to protect the freedom of religious dissenters.

It is time, he said, "to find out what correlation there is between fundamental freedoms and the Christian traditions that were explicated by Christ and that small band of people 2,000 years ago.

"It is my absolute conclusion," he said, "that if the religious community of the United States does not rise up from the very grassroots to the top of its hierarchy to stop S.1, S.1 will be law."

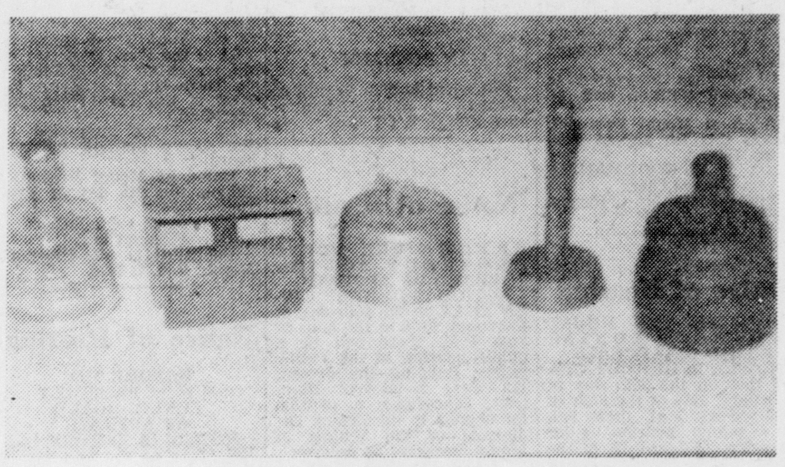
Butter molds date back to early settler days

Collecting
with Grace Carolyn

I'm sure I've said it before, but it's true. One of the best parts of writing the Collecting column is meeting people with like interests who are willing to share them.

Recently I have become acquainted with a young (I had supposed very young, until she mentioned an almost-grown son — could be collecting keeps one young?) teacher of a multi-handicapped classroom. While it is true the children suffer from difficult handicaps, they are partially recompensed by having this patient loving teacher, who helps each one according to his or her own special needs.

She also collects primitive Americana: tools, utensils and the like, and particularly butter molds. As she explains it, butter has a unique history.



In these margarine days butter may be virtually unknown to the present generation, but in the old days it was made at home from fresh-churned cream, then often molded into shapes with various decorations on top with the aid of hand-carved wooden molds.

IT IS BELIEVED that butter was first discovered by the Arabs during their travels, when the rolling gait of the camels carrying containers of milk and cream churned the contents into butter. The butter was used not only as food, but as medicine, hair dressing, body ointment and lubricating of all kinds. (Remember when your mother put a dab of butter on a burned finger?)

The innovation of molds for butter was brought to America by the early-early settlers, somewhat later than the cows, of course, which were imported about the mid-1600s. Possibly the art of decorating the butter arose from competiton among farmers to get the best price, or possibly just as an identifying mark. But whatever, the print was carved by the farmer or by a local craftsman.

Early molds were crudely carved but appealing, while later ones became more intricately carved and more decorative. It is believed that the rectangular ones are the oldest. The plungers were the decorated part, being carved with images of fruits, flowers, animals and abstracts and geometrics.

THE FIRST PATENT for a butter mold was issued in 1866, but they were made long before that by hand at home.

The plunger type is the most common, which consists of a handle and "pusher" upon which the circular or rectangular design is carved, and a bowl part to contain the butter. All those shown in the picture are plunger types. They are sometimes called "case molds."

You might find many types of flowers used as decor in the carving: wildflower, full rose and bud, daisy, clover, bluebell or sunflower. Others are stars, sheaf of wheat, strawberry, pineapple, acorn, eagle, cow, sheep, duck, rooster and many others. My friend's collection contains one unusual mold in that the owner's name is carved (by mistake, probably) not in reverse. Therefore, the name would appear in reverse on the printed butter. (Sounds rather like someone who might make two left sleeves for a garment, and guess who has been known to do that!)

PLUNGER MOLDS came in many sizes. Most common is the one pound, but there are examples of half-pound, quarter-pounds and miniatures for one serving. Miniature molds are often found in gift shops and have been widely reproduced.

So far, we have been discussing carved wooden molds, but as you can see from the picture, they were made of other materials, as commercial production increased. Left to right are a glass mold (with cow design), an early rectangular mold, a round steel or pewter mold, the plunger from a round mold and a round wooden mold showing the plunger in place.

Should you start collecting butter molds now? Surely if you can afford to use butter, you can afford butter molds! A nicely carved primitive example may cost anywhere from $25 to $45, possibly more for a unique design.

For the names of two booklets on the subject of butter molds you may write me. Please address Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Remember, please, the SASE.

Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Jury

Two big events closed out 1975 for Mary Ellen Kirchhoff of Mount Prospect. She was a December graduate of Illinois State University and on Dec. 27 became the bride of another ISU graduate, Fred Jury of Belvidere, Ill.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Writing on shingles based on latest data

I am writing about shingles. I had them and at that time I wrote to Dr. Joseph Molner; he was writing in our newspaper like you are.

My problem is your information is different from his. You say you can't catch singles from a person with chicken pox. Dr. Molner says, take care to stay away from youngsters with chicken pox, a week or two of being careful is a small price to pay if you can avoid shingles.

You say if you have an attack of shingles and recover, you are not immune. Dr. Molner says an attack does produce immunity against a second attack.

Could you please clear this up for me? I know there is a gap of several years between the two opinions, but I need to know as my daughter-in-law just broke out with shingles.

Yes there probably have been a few years between the accounts. I can't speak for the late Dr. Molner, but I can say that the statements you attribute to me are the thinking of modern virologists who are authorities in the field.

Dr. Richard Johnson of Johns Hopkins Medical Center writes in the latest edition of the textbook of medicine (Beeson and McDermott 1975) "zoster (shingles) rarely develops after exposure to chicken pox or other cases of zoster." Later in his discussion, he points out that the very rare person who gets zoster on exposure to chicken pox or other cases of shingles is the one whose immune mechanism is shot, for example, because of destruction of the immune system in the course of treatment of leukemia. By contrast, a person without immunity can get chicken pox after exposure to a patient with shingles.

Dr. Johnson notes in this same discussion, "There is a popular misconception that herpes zoster (shingles) does not recur. However, zoster does not give immunity to further attacks, and the likelihood of a second attack is about the same as, if not slightly greater than, that of having suffered the first."

Perhaps the account you read contributed to the widespread mistaken idea that an attack of shingles confers immunity. In any case it isn't so. It is quite possible for you to have another attack of shingles.

Time marches on and with it our knowledge constantly increases. When knowledge increases, changes can and do occur.

For many years, once in a while, a spray of saliva comes out of my mouth. Could you tell me what this is?

It is saliva. The salivary glands store some saliva and they have a duct or opening in the mouth. When one of these is squeezed by pressure, as in opening the mouth or other muscular movements, stored saliva will squirt out just as if you squeezed on a bulb syringe or the bulb on a spray device. The spraying has no medical significance.

Early blooming shrubs possible

The homeline

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: It seems awfully early to me, but a friend says this is the time to bring in spring-flowering branches if I want their frangrance-in-bloom before the regular spring-time popping-out. I'm just checking to make sure. — Sharon Gunther.

Your friend is right. The buds of early-flowering woody plants were formed in the fall. These buds will come out when exposed to warmth and moisture after six weeks-plus of being dormant during the cold months.

A branch or two should be taken so as not to disturb the shape of the bush. Crush the stem end with a hammer so that the water can be absorbed more easily. Place these stems in a pail of water in low light and at a low temperature, if it's at all possible.

When the buds start to develop and the color is showing, the branches are ready to arrange for display. You'll find they last longer when moved to cooler rooms at night.

Dear Doroth: My little granddaughter marked on her Madame Alexander doll and her mother is very upset over it. I told her I'd write you and was sure you'd have an answer. The stain is ballpoint ink on the plastic face. — Mrs. Walter Swain.

Glad I don't have to disappoint you. All doll hospitals recommend leaving the doll outside until the marks disappear. there's something about the dew and sunlight doing the job.

Dear Dorothy: I'd like to suggest the way my mother taught me to get the bitterness out of cooked rutabagas. Cook the rutabagas well, mash, adding butter and salt to taste, then add hot mashed potatoes — just enough to take away the bitter taste. It's absolutely delicious.—Gwen Flewell

Dear Dorothy: Your readers might be interested in how we recycle small pieces of soap. They are shaved with a sharp knife or scraped across a vegetable grater. Colors and different kinds are mixed, for interesting effects. The soap then goes into a saucepan large enough to prevent boiling over the top, and covered with enough hot water to resemble a fiarly thick soup. This mixture is then boiled on low heat (to prevent scorching) and stirred occasionally. It is poured into small, clean, plastic margarine containers, circular in shape.

Place out of reach of children or pets and allow to cool completely. To remove from the containers, press lightly on the sides of the containers or loosen slightly around the edges with a dull knife. Allow bars to remain uncovered until completely dry. Wrap for storage in waxed paper or plastic wrap. You have attractive, unusual bars of soap that are conversation pieces. — Margaret W. Griffin.

The way we see it

Disgrace seen in pet killings

The problem of pet overpopulation is a tragedy in all parts of the nation, including the Northwest suburbs.

It was revealed this week that in just one community, Elk Grove Village, 600 animals (mostly dogs) were destroyed last year. The village police department collects stray and abandoned pets and delivers them to Carroll's Kennels, Wood Dale, where they are kept for three days.

If the animal is not claimed then, it is put to death.

At $15 per animal, Elk Grove Village last year spent $9,000 killing unwanted pets.

Elk Grove Village; the pattern, unfortunately, is repeated in community after community. In New York City, it is estimated that 100,000 cats are put to death in just one year.

There are simply too many pets for the number of families who want them. And the fault is primarily that of pet owners.

Because such animals live in man's environment where food and shelter are generally plentiful, their numbers are not limited by the normal forces of nature.

Man therefore must intervene to control the number of animals in his environment. It seems unconscionable that we control our pet population by killing unwanted animals instead of preventing their births.

We direct an unending stream of unwanted animals at a few private and semi-private agencies. Often these organizations are staffed by people who care deeply about animals, who would rather return a pet to its owner or find it a new home but who are forced to the grim job of destroying today's surplus of pets to make way for tomorrow's.

Private and public agencies are taking steps to reduce this problem. Cities and villages pass licensing laws to force people to tag, control and care for their animals.

At many private agencies, if you want to adopt a female pet you must have it spayed so it cannot add to the problem.

But these steps have been ineffective. What is needed is an awakening of conscience on the part of many people who own pets.

The Herald believes anyone with a pet who does not intend to use it for professional breeding should seriously consider having it altered to avoid bringing more unwanted animals into the world.

I want each of you to grow up, have a nice owner and observe zero population growth!

'No chases in my modern auto'

Dorothy Meyer's column

by DOROTHY MEYER

The other night I was watching "Ellery Queen" on television and in one scene Ellery got into his car and found a note on his steering wheel. It said, "I understand you are looking for me. Follow the black limousine that is now parked behind you."

Then the big black limousine pulled away from the curb and down the street, and Ellery started his little grey coupe and immediately followed as per instruction.

Not with my car, he wouldn't.

With my car, if there was a note like that on my steering wheel, I'd have to get out of my car, go to the limousine behind me and say, "Hey, mysterious stranger, don't rush — I have to warm up my car awhile before I can follow you."

This is because my car is equipped with air pollution controls. And if I'm going to follow anybody they'd darned well better wait while I start my car three times and it dies, but when it finally catches it wants to idle a while.

Quite a while.

And Ellery Queen better be glad he's in the 1940's because he'd never get anywhere these days.

In fact, I don't know how any of the good guys and bad guys manage to cope today. What with seat belts, shoulder harnesses and having to let their cars warm up before they can start to chase each other, it must be enough to turn a bad guy honest or a good cop bad.

And now air bags are back in the auto safety picture. As I understand it, these things automatically inflate upon impact, cushioning the driver against bodily injury.

Can't you just see the typical scene where one guy tries to crowd the other guy off the road and over a cliff? The first time they connect — POOF — there go their airbags and they both go over the edge.

Or the auto chase bit where cars are careening around corners and knocking over garbage cans and fruit peddlers. Or the crash-through-the-roadblock scenario. Or the ram-through-the-closed-gate trick. Every time there's impact — POOF — there goes another airbag.

Of course, the script writers will ignore the airbag like they ignore the parking situation and shoulder harnesses. Television cops and robbers always find a place to park and they can leap out of their cars in a split second. I have to park three blocks from where I want to be, and anytime I'm in too big a hurry to leap out of my car I strangle myself in the harness and knock off my wig. I don't think I can hack an airbag too.

Oh well, I won't worry about something that isn't here yet. Besides, right now I have to go out and start my car — I have a date to follow a black limousine in ten minutes.

The almanac

(by United Press International)

Today is Saturday, Feb. 7, the 38th day of 1976 with 328 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter.

The morning star is Venus.

The evening stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American novelist Sinclair Lewis was born Feb. 7, 1885.

On this day in history:

• In 1926, the average pay for common labor in the United States was 54 cents an hour.

• In 1956, Autherine Lucy, the first Negro admitted to the University of Alabama, was expelled on grounds she accused school officials of conspiring in riots that accompanied her court-ordered enrollment.

• In 1973, the U.S. Senate voted to set up a seven-member committee to investigate the Watergate break-in of Democratic national Headquarters.

• In 1975, the government reported that unemployment rose to 8.2 per cent in January, confirming fears that the recession was the worst since World War II.

A thought for the day: English novelist Charles Dickens said, "There are books of which the backs and covers are the best parts."

Some questions for library vote

Fence post
letters to the editor

Like other members of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library board, I have been giving a slide presentation on the Feb. 28 library referendum to a variety of community groups. I am writing this letter because I thought it would be a service to the public to answer some of the questions that have been raised at those meetings:

Q. With the population boom tapering off, why do we have to build a library addition?

A. We are already short of room for books. Although the population is growing more slowly than in the past, it is still growing — possibly to 106,000 by 1990. Long before then, we will have to double the size of our book collection just to keep pace with Illinois Library Association per capita standards.

Q. What happened to the book bond issue that was authorized last spring?

A. The library board has not issued the bonds because there is no room for the 72,000 books the bonds otherwise could pay for. Legal authorization to issue the bonds later remains in effect.

Q. Couldn't many of these books be squeezed into the present library building?

A. The open plan of the library is misleading. Shelves couldn't be placed any closer without becoming a safety hazard. There has to be room for more than nearly 300 patrons on a busy night. Not infrequently, every seat in the library is filled and every space in the parking lot is filled. If we eliminated all programs and activities, filling up even the busy Dunton Room with books, that still wouldn't provide for all the books we need.

Q. Shouldn't the library make use of some of the schools that are going to be closed instead of building an addition?

A. A public library's collection is impractical to divide. People usually want books and materials from more than one department. Branches are inherently wasteful because basic library facilities, such as reference materials, have to be duplicated. Additional expensive personnel would be required. Also schools would be costly to remodel for library purposes. The library already has an ideal central location and serves outlying areas with a large new bookmobile.

U.S. still needs to conserve its energy

It's a message we don't like to hear simply because there's so much truth in it.

Last week a government-financed private study reminded us once again that we've neglected a central message of the 1973-74 energy crisis — that energy conservation is absolutely vital to the survival of our nation.

The group, called Worldwide Watch, stated we're still consuming energy "like a childless society," intent on leaving no resources behind for future generations.

These are harsh words. But the report had more to offer; it suggested a variety of ways to save energy in the United States.

• Travel in more efficient cars and develop mass transit systems, whenever possible.

• Use better insulation and more efficient heating.

• Shift freight from less efficient to more efficient forms of transportation (in other words, use trains instead of trucks).

• Improve food processing and packaging to save energy.

• Develop less wasteful appliances, more efficient power plants and reuse heat that is now discarded as waste.

We've heard these suggestions before, but they bear repeating again, for unless we respond to the erosion of our oil and natural gas supplies, we'll face the eventual strangulation of our energy-overloaded society.

Dateline 1776

(by United Press International)

CHANTILLY, Va., Feb. 7 — Richard Henry Lee asked Samuel Adams if Congress might assign a general officer to command the colony's nine battalions in event the British should invade Virginia. He also claimed the newly created American fleet could seize 150,000 pounds worth of Tory goods loaded in small vessels off Norfolk.

'Let's keep it Kirchoff'

Perhaps some appeals not to change Kirchoff Road will help simplify directions of the street plans we now have and save time for more pressing problems.

Many people were saddened when our tall illuminated sign disappeared without too much notice. It was visible from the toll road and made one feel he was home. No one seemed to know whose decision that was.

We have Meadow Drive now and how does 3000 Rolling Meadows Road, Rolling Meadows, Illinois, 60008 grab you? Have you ever had an allowed space for address that was large enough? Now we never will.

I have the utmost respect for Mr. McMinn, but couldn't Rolling Meadows be added to the Kirchoff off ramp or one of the approaching signs? Or could we not have our elevated sign back or both?

While on the subject, most people have no idea how our streets are planned, circles, semicircles, courts, lanes, etc. No north or south in most cases. No one knows where the dividing lines are and how the numbers change. I'm not sure these short streets and courts protect children. They are usually playgrounds and the safety rules aren't practiced. To complicate things, occasionally the signs are moved to different streets (perhaps pranksters), but it takes gas to run them down.

Let's keep Kirchoff and try to learn where the other streets are and where they are going.

She's grateful

I wish to make folks aware of the wonderful work the men at Prospect Heights Fire Department are doing.

The paramedics are so thorough and painstaking and the firemen are speedy and dependable.

They have been called to my house for both fire and 12 heart attacks and I am still alive and so grateful.

Ask Andy

Edison—wizard of electricity

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Scott Murr, 13, of Thomasville, N.C., for his question:
WHO WAS THE WIZARD OF MENLO PARK?

Wherever you are right now you are probably within sight of one of man's greatest inventions — the electric, or incandescent, lamp. The next time you see a motion picture or listen to a record, you will be enjoying modern versions of early inventions built by the Wizard of Menlo Park. His name was Thomas Alva Edison but, because of his genius and countless inventions, he was called the Wizard of Menlo Park.

Thomas Edison was born on Feb. 11, 1847, in Milan, Ohio. He was the youngest of seven children. His father was a prosperous shingle manufacturer and his mother had once been a schoolteacher. As a young boy, Tom was filled with curiosity and was eternally asking questions. It seemed as though every sentence he uttered began with a how, why or what. His patient mother tried to answer his questions, but even her experience at teaching couldn't help her keep up with him.

Many times Tom himself would set out to find answers. Once, he noted that chickens sat on eggs to hatch them. When he asked how they did this and could get no satisfactory answer, he collected eggs and sat on them himself in an attempt to answer his own question.

At age 7, Tom began his formal education. And Andy would like to tell you here and now that schools are quite a bit different now than they were in 1854 — and so are teachers. After about three months of Tom's questions, his teacher became irritated. One thing led to another, and finally Tom's mother decided to educate him at home. While his formal education lasted only three months in public schools, his mother inspired in him a desire for knowledge that was to last a lifetime.

By the time Tom was 12 he was working on the Grand Trunk Railway as a newsboy selling papers, candy, peanuts and sandwiches. Even on the train Tom kept busy with experiments and his own newspaper, the Weekly Herald. At 16 Tom took a job as a railroad telegrapher. Most of his wages from this point on would be spent on various pieces of laboratory and electrical equipment — the materials that he would later use to light up the world.

In 1876 Edison moved from Newark to Menlo Park, N.J. Gathering around him a handful of skilled assistants and mechanics, he devoted all his time to inventions. While in Menlo Park he perfected the incandescent light bulb and the phonograph. By the time he left Menlo Park in 1887, he had a list of more than 400 patented inventions.

Thomas A. Edison died in October 1931. He believed that you had to work hard to succeed in life. Before he began work on a particular project he always took the time to read every available bit of information. It was in this way that he avoided repeating the mistakes of others.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Julian Chavez, 12, of Gamerco, N.M., for his question:
WHAT ARE TEETH MADE OF?

The importance of our teeth cannot be overestimated, and proper diet and good care are essential if we are going to keep them healthy. Actually, each tooth has two parts, the crown, which grows above the gums, and the root, which grows in a socket in the jawbone. Each tooth is made up of four different kinds of tissue.

What we see is the outer portion, or enamel, which is the hardest substance in the human body, consisting mainly of calcium phosphate. Next is the dentin, a hard, yet elastic, tissue containing organic matter in addition to calcium phosphate. The dentist surrounds the pulp cavity, or dental pulp, which contains tissues, nerves and blood vessels. The fourth tissue, cementum, covers and protects the root of each tooth.

These four tissues work together to help keep each tooth in good shape. Our second set of teeth is permanent and does not replace itself, so it is our job to make sure these teeth get proper care every day of our lives.

Do you have a question to ASK ANDY? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to ASK ANDY in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 680, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

'Animals Nobody Loved' —good television show

by JOAN HANAUER

If wild horses couldn't drag you to a television show about coyotes and rattlesnakes, then you'd be missing a bet.

The show deals with "varmints" in the Western states, "The Animals Nobody Loved," a National Geographic one-hour special to air on Channel 11 Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

Mustangs that are crowding cattle off drought-striken Western rangeland, coyotes that sheepmen say kill lambs and ewes, and the rattlers that both fascinate and frighten man, are the stars of the program, the final one in the 1975-76 season of National Geographic specials.

WHOEVER NAMES these specials should be sentenced to a six-months course in understatement. Almost every show has carried a title that promised more than it delivered.

In this case, the program deals with three creatures out of hundreds of unloved species, from cockroach to great white shark, that are not mentioned.

The varmints that are pictured produce a portrait of animals that man despises because they do not serve his purpose.

Among the more intriguing aspects of the show is that each creature has its defenders. Now anyone who sees the grace of a wild horse running free would be tempted to defend it, except perhaps those who feel the pinch in the pocketbook.

Coyotes look enough like dogs to curry favor, particularly when you see how adorable they look as three-week-old pups, and considering the controversy over whether they really are major sheep killers.

THE RATTLESNAKE'S right to life is another matter, and it takes a man like Sam Jones to walk the dawn highways of New Mexico to protect rattlers from being run over when they doze in the road. Jones, talking about all the predators who dine on baby rattlers, refers to them as "the little fellas."

Since children often love to watch animal shows, a word of caution to parents: The program shows animals as they are in nature, not as they act in Disney, which means blood and brutality as well as beauty.

Bison hold slim lead in wrestling

by KEITH REINHARD

Propelling six wrestlers into the semi-finals, Buffalo Grove carried a slim one-half point lead out of the first evening of combat at the Forest View-hosted Mid-Suburban League Wrestling Tournament Friday night.

The Bison, with 34½ points, were threatened by a pack of contenders led by Hersey with 34. Following are Elk Grove with 31, Rolling Meadows with 30, Hoffman Estates and Arlington with 29, Conant with 28½, Fremd with 25, Wheeling with 24, Palatine with 21, Schaumburg 18½ and Forest View and Prospect with 14.

There were the usual share of upsets and near-misses at the individual level. At 105 pounds, Wheeling's Ray Auger knocked off Arlington's second-seeded Paul Preissing, 5-2.

And at 126, another Wildcat, Dale Walters, bumped fourth-seeded Paul Hyneman of Rolling Meadows, 6-0. In the heavyweight feature, Bill Fletcher of Hersey shocked top-seeded John Petko of Palatine, 5-3.

One surprise didn't occur. Top-ranked John Carpenter of Elk Grove trailed unseeded Tim Dunn of Buffalo Grove, 5-3, when he turned him over with less than one-half minute to go in their 138-pound quarter-final bout.

Another seeded grappler, Hersey's Rick Dewar, was knocked off at 145. The third-seeded Huskie lost on a 0-0 referee's decision to Tom Andersen of the host Falcons.

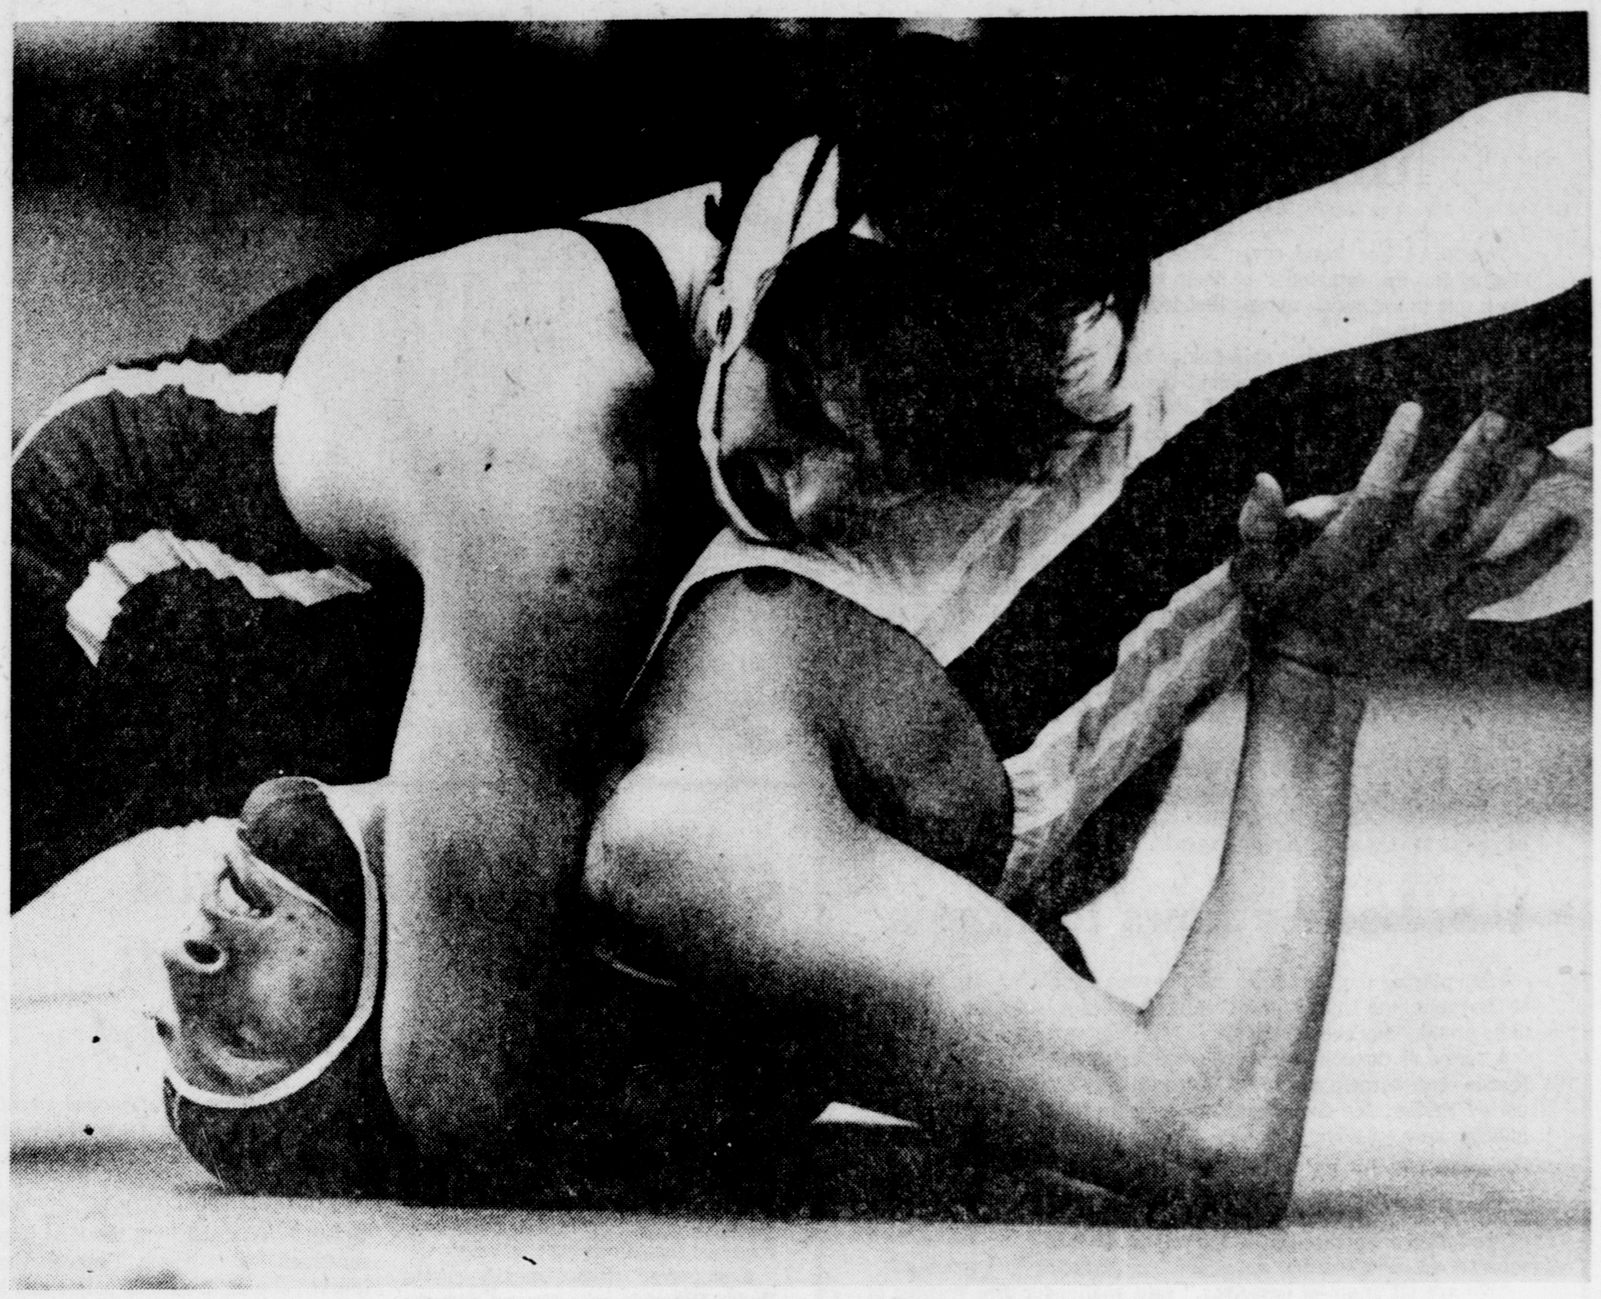
Also at 145, Mustang Pete Martin dumped Tim Goergen of Conant, 5-2. Both had gone into action with outstanding records, although Goergen was unseeded.

At 132, Wheeling's third-seeded Mike Reif had to rally for a 5-2 verdict over Brian Ragen of Conant in another action-packed bout.

In most divisions, the top-seeded entries advanced to the semis with little difficulty. Saxon Dave Cooke won 9-0 at 98, and his 105-pound teammate Al Blount fashioned a 3:48 pin.

Bison Tim Foley won 11-3 at 112 and his teammate Rich Wilhelm registered a 3:27 win by fall at 126. Hoffman's Chad McCreary was an impressive 7-2 winner at 145, but Prospect's Terry Reed took him into overtime before yielding the decision.

Other first-seeded wrestlers — Jim Carlstrom of Meadows at 119, Hawk Jim Thomas at 155, Palatine's Brian DeWyze at 167 and Brian Gibbons of Buffalo Grove at 185 — also sailed into today's semi-final action beginning at noon.



WIN FOR TIM. Conant's Tim Goergen bears down on Bob Rader of Schaumburg en route to a 12-2 verdict in opening round 145-pound action at the MSL conference wrestling meet at Forest View Friday. Goergen was subsequently knocked off in the quarter-finals, 5-2, although his team remained in the running behind Buffalo Grove for loop laurels. (Photo by Bob Finch)

Cards dump Huskies; Bison roll, 72-48

by ART MUGALIAN

The Arlington Cardinals employed a fullcourt press like they had been using it all year — as indeed they have — to stop Hersey 55-49 in an important Mid-Suburban North basketball game Friday night at Hersey.

The loss dimmed Hersey's North title hopes by dropping their record to 5-2, two games behind division-leading Buffalo Grove, with just three to play.

Arlington, now 4-3 in the North, got 17 points from 6-foot-1 senior forward Jim Grandt, who was drilling from just about everywhere on the court. Dan Frase had 11 points and Greg Kloiber 10 for the Cards.

But it was the press — accurately a three-quarter-court press — that forced Hersey out of its offense and into 27 turnovers during the game.

"We've been using the press all season," said Arlington coach Don Drain, whose team is now 7-11 over-all. "We used it against Hersey the first time, but it was much more effective tonight."

Despite 16 points from Jay McDermott and 14 from Clyde Glass, the taller Huskies trailed all the way from the end of the first quarter to the final gun. They pulled to within four points with :30 left on a basket by Glass, but that was as close as the Huskies got.

"We had to keep Hersey from setting up," said Drain, "so we had to press the whole game. We like to switch around — we started with a 2-2-1, but the diamond was more effective so we stayed with it."

Drain had nothing but praise for Frase, the 5-7 junior guard, who guided the Cardinal offense for all but a few minutes in the second half after he picked up his fourth foul.

"That was probably Danny's best game," said the Arlington coach. 'He ran both the offense and the defense. You know, he makes the press work."

Grandt had 13 points in the first half and Kloiber had eight as Frase made the pinpoint passes inside. Then in the second half, Frase started driving to the basket himself, helping to build a 10-point Card lead.

Arlington moved to a stall offense in the fourth period, shooting seldom — the Cards had no field goals in the final quarter — but clicking for eight straight free throws.

Hersey is now 13-7 over-all, including a win over Arlington in January. But that was back when Arlington's press wasn't quite so effective.

Still perfect

by JIM COOK

With scoring aces Brian Allsmiller (22 points) and Kevin McKenna (20) equalizing each other offensively, Buffalo Grove shed its one-man team tag by throttling Palatine, 72-48.

Allsmiller, the Bison's 6-foot-8 pivotman, and McKenna, Palatine's versatile forward, locked into their anticipated scoring duel, but while the pair of sharpshooters were virtually cancelling each other's achievements, Buffalo Grove powered to its seventh successive North Division triumph behind balance and muscle.

"Fred Heesch played another super game for us," Buffalo Grove head coach Paul Grady said of the 6-foot-4 junior's 15 points and six rebounds. "Some people think that when Brian's out, we lose everything."

Allsmiller was sidelined nearly one-third of the game with foul trouble, but Buffalo Grove matched Palatine's scoring during his absence as Heesch,

Sheila Young in skating spotlight

United States collects a gold!

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Sheila Young, the new speed queen of the Olympics, gave the United States its first gold medal of the Winter Games Friday when she won the women's 500-meter speed skating championship in record time.

In adding a gold to the silver she earned in Thursday's 1,500-meters, Young also placed herself in excellent position to become the first U.S. athlete ever to win three medals in a single Winter Olympics. She'll get her chance in the 1,000 Saturday when, Sheila said, "I'll be trying my utmost and hoping for a good placing."

Admittedly a bundle of nerves, Young set her Olympic mark of 42.76 seconds midway through the event, and then kept skating on the sides to relieve the tension.

Cathy Priestner of Canada, one of the girls Young feared most, already has in with a 43.12, but still to come were such strong threats as Leah Poulos of Northbrook, Ill., and two Russian Girls, Averina Tatiana and Vera Krasnova.

"It was all so weird," related Young, the world record holder for the distance at 40.91 seconds. "I wasn't really sure I had won till everyone finished skating. After Leah and Tatiana finished, then I had a little more confidence I could hold on. I felt a rush through my body andit felt so good."

The 25-year-old Detroit girl, still suffering from the affects of a sore throat, described her actions during the long half-hour she had to wait after the race, with her parents and fiancee among the interested listeners.

"I skated around, watching the clock, watching the skaters, and just getting nervous," she recalled. "When I heard the interim time of Krasnova (10.64) I thought, 'Oh, no, here it goes.' Then when I watched the clock after the 200 and 300 meters, I thought I still had a chance."

On a cold, foggy morning, heavy enough to postpone the start of the competition for 10 minutes, Sheila's star continued to shine. Tatiana had to settle for her second bronze medal in as many days with a 43.17, edging the bitterly disappointed Poulos by four-hundredths of a second for third place. Krasnova was fifth in 43.23.

Ironically, it qas another Russian girl, Ludmila Titova, who deprived Young of the 500-meter bronze medal in the 1972 Olympics.

The third U.S. entry in Friday's race, Lori Monk of Madison, Wis., skated alone as the last in the field of 27 entrants and placed ninth in 44 seconds flat.

The first five finishers all broke the Olympic record of 43.33 set four years ago by Anne Henning, who watched the race in her role as a television commentator.

Gold medalist has aunt living in Mount Prospect

Although the Winter Olympics is thousands of miles away in Innsbruck, Austria, one United States speed skater has a special rooting section located in Mount Prospect.

Sheila Young, who will be seeking to become the first American to ever win three medals early this morning in the 1500 meter event, is being cheered on by the Louis Young family.

"It's been just marvelous," said her aunt Flo Friday. "This morning we heard on the radio that she won the gold medal (for 500 meters). All we've been doing is calling Detroit and congratulating each other."

Sheila's parents are at the Olympics, so the Mount Prospect Youngs have been celebrating by phone with the rest of the brothers and sisters of this large and excited Young clan.

"Sheila's been spending weekends with us since she was eight or nine," said her aunt. "She took part in all the Mount Prospect races and those at Northbrook. I guess the idea was to get experience in different races and different rinks."

Sheila won a silver medal in Thursday's 1,500 meter race. Her father (Louis' brother) got her started. He was a Michigan state skating champ.

NCAA suspends 7 MSU gridders

The NCAA has found seven Michigan State football players ineligible for the remainder of their collegiate careers because of their role in recruiting abuses that led to NCAA disciplinary action against the team.

However, MSU officials said Friday each player will be given the opportunity to appear at hearings that will be held to determine whether the university will seek their reinstatement.

The NCAA placed Michigan State on three years probation after citing the football program Jan. 25 for 34 recruiting violations. The action against the players, however, was not officially acknowledged until Friday.

The seven players involved in the violations were identified as sophomore tailback Ted Bell of Youngstown, Ohio; sophomore defensive tackle Larry Bethea of Newport News, Va.; junior tight end Mike Cobb of Youngstown, Ohio; junior defensive end Jim Epolito of McKeesport, Pa.; junior defensive back Joe Hunt of Toledo, Ohio; sophomore middle guard Melvin Land of Campbell, Ohio; and sophomore quarterback Ed Smith of Pittsburgh.

Bell, Bethea, Cobb and Hunt were considered almost certain starters next season. Bethea and Cobb were regulars this year.

Hunt and Cobb were the two players who used the credit card of a university booster to purchase over $600 worth of clothes. Bell was cited for bringing his brother and sister to campus during a recruitment visit at university expense.

U.S. hockey bows to Russia

After playing the Russians virtually even for all but five minutes of the game, the United States ice hockey team had a lot of reason to be proud today even in defeat.

A series of three interlocking penalties to the Americans helped Russia score three goals in a 4:55 span midway through the opening period Friday, and they proved to be critical as the Soviets could manage only a 6-2 triumph over the Yanks in their Olympic matchup.

Outclassed in talent but not in spirit, the final result couldn't come as a disappointment to the U.S. After all, they were up against a combined All-Star unit of the two Russian teams that recently won five and tied one against the National Hockey League.

"We are all proud of ourselves," said goaltender Jim Warden of Michigan Tech, outstanding even though he is coming back from a hamstring injury. "The guys all feel we did well and now we're just waiting for Czechoslovakia on Sunday. We have a tremendous lot of confidence and this was a morale booster. I'd have to call it a moral victory."

State censures Phillips, E. Leyden

Illinois High School Association directors cited 16 schools for rules violations Friday, censured three schools and placed defending state Class AA basketball champion Chicago Wendell Phillips and Chicago Simeon on probation until the end of the 1977 season.

Phillips, rated No. 3 in the UPI rankings made by a board of coaches, was punished because coach Herb Brown pulled his team off the floor before the half of a game at East Chicago Washington. Phillips was prohibited from scheduling competition outside the Chicago public league during the 1976-77 season, and found to be in breach of contract with the East Chicago school.

The directors also instructed executive secretary Harry Fitzhugh to convey to East Chicago Washington that the directors "deplored" Brown's action.

Censure was voted against East Leyden high school, ranked No. 2 in Class AA by the coaches this week, and an unidentified member of the team was placed on probation. If he receives another technical foul for unsportsmanlike conduct, the directors voted, he will be suspended for the balance of the season.

Bulls outlast Lakers, 112-106

Norman Van Lier scored 26 points and Mickey Johnson added 24 Friday night as the Chicago Bulls held off a fourth quarter rally by Los Angeles to defeat the Lakers 112-106 and break a three game losing streak.

After the Bulls built up a 19 point lead with 9:05 left to play in the third quarter, the Lakers scored eight straight points and pulled to within 11 at the end of three periods.

They cut the margin to one with 5:07 remaining when Corky Calhoun hit on a 20 footer to make the socre 100-99 for Chicago. But Van Lier's two free throws put the Bulls ahead by three and they scored 10 of the next 17 points.

It was only the fourth win for the Bulls in the last 11 games and gave the Lakers a two game losing streak. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led all scorers with 33 points, followed by teammate Gail Goodrich with 28.

Black Hawks put out Flames, 2-1

Dennis Hull and Dale Tallon scored third period goals Friday night to overcome a one-goal deficit and carry the Chicago Black Hawks to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Flames.

Hull was on his knees in front of the Atlanta goal when he poked the puck into the net during a wild scramble at 4:08 of the final period. That tied the game at 1-1. Tallon scored the winning goal at 19:09 on a wrist-shot from 15 feet.

Ivan Boldirev broke in the clear along the right wing side of the ice. He cried the puck into the Atlanta zone and forced the only Atlanta defenseman to move to his left. At the last moment, he flipped it across the ice to Tallon, streaking down the center, and goaltender Daniel Bouchard had no chance against Tallon's rifle shot.

The Flames led through the first two periods on a goal by Curt Bennett, who tipped in Larry Carrierre's shot from the blue line. Atlanta's Hilliard Graves missed a wide-open net with a rebound shot with 2:11 left in the game.

NHL expansion plans rumored

The National Hockey League plans to expand to Denver and Miami for the 1977-78 season, sources close to the league said Friday.

The sources said Denver would be in the Adams Division of the NHL along with Boston, Buffalo, Toronto and California. Miami would be in the Patrick Division, joining Philadelphia, Atlanta and the New York Rangers and Islanders. The expansion would give the NHL four division with five teams apiece.

Don V. Ruck, vice president of the National Hockey League, Friday denied the league's intention to expand in the near future to Denver and Miami or anywhere else.

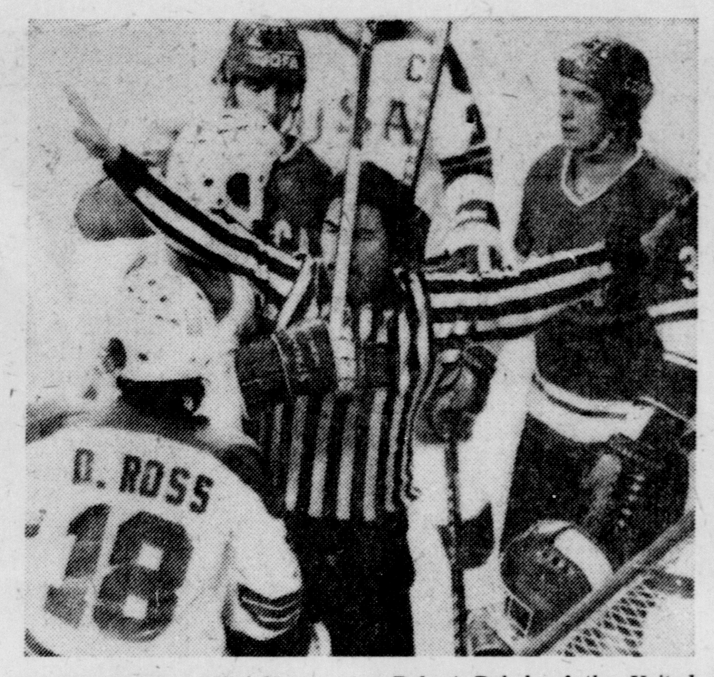
"Expansion has not been on th agenda for many months; it has not been discussed and is not on the agenda for our meeting in New York Feb. 27," Ruck said.

Ruck said both Denver and Seattle had been slated for expansion in the 1976-77 season during the June, 1974 meetings but that both groups failed to meet deadlines for preliminary payments toward the franchise costs and also failed on subsequent extension dates.

Soviets lead Olympic medals race

The Soviet Union has accumulated the most medals so far at the 12th winter Olympics after three days of competition. Next comes the United States in the race for the gold, silver and bronze medals.

The Soviet Union has three gold and four bronze, while the U.S. has a gold and two silvers.



PEACE MOVE. Official separates Robert Dobek of the United States and Soviet Vladimir Lutchenko (3) during fierce hockey action Friday in Winter Olympic Games in Innsbruck. Russia toppled the United States, 6-2.

Glenbrook North's fast start sinks Maine West; Spartans hold on, 67-64

by DOUG PALM

A strong second half comeback fell just short Friday night as the Maine West Warriors dropped a 67-64 Central Suburban South decision to Glenbrook North on the winner's home court.

West played without starting center Buddy Doroskin, who was out with the flu. Bob Zuccarini, their most aggressive player got in early foul trouble and was forced to the bench.

North shot out to a 10-0 and 20-10 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Maine West forced Glenbrook North to turn the ball over three successive times at the outset of the second quarter. Converting two of those miscues into a basket and two free throws, the Warriors started to swing the momentum back their way, and with it came renewed confidence.

In a span of 1:15 near the end of the first half, Maine West matched Glenbrook North basket for basket, as Zuccarini drove for two buckets and keyed the Warriors running game.

Glenbrook North was particularly effective from the top of the key and from the baseline as lefthanded guard Jim Borrasso tallied 16 in the first half and passed off for several assists. North led 36-27 at the half.

The second half comeback was led by Bill Fininis and Pete Karabas who combined for 25 points. Fininis, who finished the night with 25 points and 9 for 15 shooting.

Karabas kept hitting from the outside and crashing the boards for key defensive rebounds, which the Warriors so desperately needed.

Karabas added 17 points, 11 from the foul line, and teamed with Fininis and Zuccarini down the stretch, as Maine West came within three points, at 65-62, only to fall short.

Down by 11 points on several occasions in the later stages, the ballhawking Warriors kept coming back, but could not quite make up the deficit brought on by their early scoring drought.

The loss dropped Maine West to 7-4 in the CSL South and 12-9 overall. Glenbrook North improved its league mark to 3-7 and its over-all record to 9-10.

Cards drop Huskies two games off pace

Tim Stonerook and Mike Marshall picked up the slack.

The Bison spurted into early command as Heesch pumped in six-first-quarter points and Palatine was suffering through an untimely free-throw drought that found coach Ron Finfrock's quintet failing to cash from the line in six first-period attempts.

Buffalo Grove parlayed a 13-4 splurge into a 21-12 margin after eight minutes. Allsmiller drilled four straight 15-foot bombs to augment the second quarter with McKenna's rebound bucket the only replay from Palatine.

Allsmiller drew his fourth personal with 5:31 remaining in the third period, but Palatine couldn't scratch closer than 13 despite brief outbursts by McKenna and Tom Iuorio.

"Since our Christmas tournament, Brian's scoring has been down, but our team's has been up," Grady emphasized.

Stonerook contributed 11 points for the Bison while Mike Ledna and Marshall added eight apiece. McKenna's 22 was complemented by 10 rebounds while long-range gunner Iuorio hit nine and both Doug Buenzow, who was slowed by the flu, and Ken Reid chipped in with six.

Wheeling wins

by BOB RICHARDS

Some teams carry a hatchet man, but what Fremd coach Mo Tharp needed Friday was a diamond cutter.

Wheeling's aggressive diamond and one fullcourt press protruded right through the Fremd offense when it counted and the Wildcats resurrected what looked like a sure loss into an exciting 60-58 win.

Had it been a tennis match, Fremd would have won in three sets as the Vikings outscored the Wildcats in each of the first three periods. Rick Kolze and Paul Gillette had led the Vikings to a 47-35 lead when, suddenly, the Vikes hit rough seas and began getting that sinking feeling.

Costly turnovers and a rash of fouls together with some quick scoring by the Wildcats made it a new ball game early in the fourth period.

And when Glen Barry took a pass from 6-5 center Keith Schildt and hit a 17-footer, the Wildcats had a 53-52 lead with 4:51 left. Fremd never led again although they managed a 58-all tie with 2:05 left.

From there it was single free throws by Alan Begrowicz and Dave Schultz that spelled victory for the Wildcats.

Schildt, showing dominance near the backboard, scored 18 points while rejecting several Fremd shots. All of his points were from the field.

Dan Larson also helped spearhead the Wheeling attack with 14 points, but the man coach Ted Ecker remembered was Barry who hit the go-ahead shot and then scored again in the waning moments.

Ecker said at first his team wasn't capitalizing on the turnovers created by the defense, but gradually "the turnovers kept coming and it paid off."

"It certainly was one of our better efforts," said Tharp. "I'm very proud of the way they played out there tonight.

Tharp said he thought Wheeling got some breaks on foul calls in the fourth period, but admitted his team had played too cautiously after it had built the 12-point lead.

Kolze and Gillette led the losers with 14 points each. Fremd is now 1-6 in the Mid Suburban North and 6-12 over-all. Wheeling is 4-3 and 10-9.

Vacation Show starts next week

Regardless of the snow on the ground, thousands of outdoor enthusiasts will be thinking "summer" at the 38th annual Chicago Sportsmen's and Vacation Show during a 10-day run Feb. 13-22 at the International Amphitheatre.

The Chicago show, a gigantic exposition of woods and waters transplanted indoors, is the world's largest of its kind with numerous attractions and hundreds of exhibits.

The special feature of the show is the stage and water Parade of Outdoors Champions headlining John Bromfield which will be held twice daily. Also on exhibit will be a live, great white shark of the variety used in the film "Jaws."

A trout fishing pond, where the catch can be taken home, a casting pond for tips on improving angling skills, ski instruction and archery are among personal participation attractions offered.

And for those thinking vacations, the travel hall will have booths by the hundreds with representatives present from all over the United States and Canada to help the planning.

Show hours are 6-11 p.m. opening day, noon to 11 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays and 1-11 p.m. remaining weekdays. Parade of Outdoor Champions will go on at 8 p.m. opening day and 2 and 8 p.m. thereafter.

Conant wins; Hoffman in 58-56 upset

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Conant moved into a tie for the lead in the Mid-Suburban League's South Division Friday as they dominated the backboards and the Prospect Knights, 58-42.

The win elevated the Cougars to 7-2 in the league, identical to the idle Schaumburg Saxons. Prospect's league mark slipped to 3-6.

Center Ron Sulaski, sophomore forward Ed MacDonald and guard Pete Scaffidi slammed the boards with more determination than they've shown all year to hold a 36-20 edge on the glass.

Coupled with 51 per cent shooting from the floor, the Cougars took the lead a minute into the game and never let go.

"This is one of the best games we've played all year," said Conant head coach Dick Redlinger. "We looked especially good in the first half."

Conant played like they belong in Chicago Stadium during the first 16 minutes, building their lead to 15 points at one time.

Scaffidi, who led all scorers with 20 points, had 10 in the first half while Sulaski kicked in 10 of his 16 points.

The big difference was Conant's rebounding, though, as they snuffed Prospect's offensive efforts after a single shot.

Sulaski finished with 13 boards and Scaffidi nine. MacDonald pulled down eight while senior foward Mike Frisch copped a half dozen.

Scaffidi polished off a well-rounded performance with five assists.

Prospect's offensive thrusts rested mostly with Chris Etter, who scored 12 points.

Redlinger, eyeing Conant's showdown with Schaumburg, Feb. 17, remarked, "The proof will be in the pudding next Friday against Hoffman Estates. That's when we have to be careful about letting down against a team we've already beaten."

Rob Totten got 10 points for Conant. Tim Kubicki and Mike Wood had eight points each for the Knights.

Storm control

by DAVID HESS

Junior Derek Storm came off the bench for Hoffman Estates and sank four clutch free throws in the final minutes to enable the Hawks to hang on and edge hosting Rolling Meadows, 58-56.

Hoffman held the Mustangs to seven points in the second quarter and carried a 14-point lead into halftime behind the inspired play of Ron Warring, who led all scorers with 22 points and 17 rebounds.

"We just plain lacked desire in the first half," said Mustang coach Bill Weinberg. "This is a game of emotions and we didn't have any until the second half."

Rolling Meadows used a swarming zone defense in the second half and forced seven turnovers and held the Hawks to eight points. The Mustangs were able to capitalize with some hot shooting and eventually pulled even in the fourth quarter.

Reserves Sam DeMarie and Terry Moran sparked the Mustang surge, but Hoffman bore down and did not let Rolling Meadows tie the score again, setting the stage for Storm's heroics.

"We had to adjust to their pressure zone," said Hawk coach Gerry Segebrecht. "We were careful to guard against a letdown but they surprised us with the zone. We kept our poise and finished strong. These kids really have a good attitude."

"We finally found the right combination," lamented Meadows coach Bill Weinberg. "Too bad it had to come so late."

Weinberg sees DeMarie as his starting guard tonight when Rolling Meadows, 3-6 in the MSL (5-13 over-all), visits division leading Schaumburg.

Hoffman Estates, now 2-6 in conference and 8-11 over-all, is host tonight to Forest View.

St. Viator tips Carmel in thriller

by MIKE GARBUS

St. Viator survived a furious fourth-quarter rally by Carmel to post a 58-56 win on the Corsairs' home floor Friday night.

The Lions carried a 46-39 advantage into the start of the final period but saw their lead dissolve into a 52-all tie when Carmel forward Ryan Milot hit a jumper with just over two minutes left in the game.

Seconds later the score was once again deadlocked at 54 before St. Viator's sophomore forward Paul Wiloff hit a short jump shot in the lane and added a free throw.

Following a time out by the hosts with 29 seconds left, Corsair guard Dennis Donnelly's baseline drive failed. When center Mark Ornatek's two follow up tips failed to drop, rebounding Lion Glenn Girard went to the free throw line after getting hacked.

The senior pivotman failed on his first try but cashed in his second. Two final Carmel free throws weren't enough to prevent them from dropping to 1-10 in the East Suburban Catholic Conference.

The Lions, meanwhile, boosted their league mark to 6-5.

Wiloff finished with 17 points and 13 rebounds to lead his club in both departments. Carmel guard Tim Murray, a nearly 20 points per game scorer, wound up with a team high 17. Ornatek grabbed nine rebounds to lead the Corsairs, who outboarded the Lions on the night 28-27.

'Conference' meet today for St. Viator swimmers

by BOB GALLAS
Swimming Editor

St. Viator swim coach John Fleck figure two out of three isn't bad, so his tankers will be going into today's conference meet with one eye on the upcoming districts and state tournament.

As in the past, Lion swimmers don't place too much importance on today's meet. After all, if the East Suburban Catholic Conference doesn't care, why should they?

The meet will again be financed through contributions from participating coaches, since the ESCC phased out swimming competition, officially anyway, years ago.

Four schools from the conference and two nonconference "invited" teams will take part in the meet, setting up the possibility that a nonmember could actually win the ESCC conference meet, an interesting possibility.

The meet starts at Maine East High School at 1 p.m. today. Diving preliminaries start at 9 a.m. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students with I.D.

"It's really an insignificant meet for us, but it's always nice to win," said Fleck. "If we'd try to get up for all three (conference, districts, state) we'd fall on our face at least once. So we'd rather do it in the conference meet," he said.

Viator has given up the conference crown to Marmion the last two years in a row. Two years ago, it was a team-wide case of flu that did it. Last year, with a team loaded down with freshmen and sophomores, Fleck opted to go for the frosh-soph title instead, keeping his underclass swimmers from competing in the varsity meet.

"On paper, I figure Marmion should beat us this year by three points," said Fleck, who admitted his talented Lions have a shot at winning the conference without really trying. "Diving will really hurt," he said.

Though they have had virtually no diving talent all year, the Lions' top diver Mark Lockowitz is out right now due to injuries he suffered in a car accident. He's listed by his coach as a "doubtful" entry in today's meet. The Lions other two divers have been recovering this week from a round of the flu.

"I figure Marmion will pick up 29 points in diving to our 10," said Fleck.

Otherwise, most of the talent-heavy squad is healthy, although Fleck is concerned about an outbreak of flu that is starting to make the rounds at the school.

The Lions have dominated the Paddock Honor Roll for top area swimmers all year and have several swimmers and both relay teams listed as among the state's 12 best.

The Lions' medley relay team is seventh statewide while their free relay team is third. Their premier backstroker, Doug Peonski is third statewide in his event with a top time of 57.00 seconds. Lion Mark Rohl is tied for 10th statewide in the 100-yard freestyle with a best time of 49.6. Both are juniors.

The Lions boast an impressive dual meet record this year of 9-3, with losses coming to Fenwick, New Trier East and Rockford Guilford, all excellent teams.

Fleck said Jon Newcomer won't be swimming his best event, the butterfly anymore. Newcomer aggravated his chronic bursitis in a car accident earlier in the season and will be limited to freestyle competition from now on.

Fleck is hoping for big things from Chris Stewart, who he says has been coming on very strong lately. Stewart's times have been coming down rapidly in the freestyle events and he holds down a leg of the Lions' state contender free relay team.

Harper wronged by Wright, 70-69

The Harper Hawks came back from an early 18-6 deficit, but fell short in the closing minutes in a 70-69 win by Wright College Friday afternoon.

With five minutes left to go in the game, the Hawks still maintained a five point lead, but Wright came back to go ahead.

The lead changed hands several times in the closing minutes, but then Wright took a three point lead with less than a minute to play. Harper scored a basket with four seconds left, but Wright then held the ball out-of-bounds and the game ended.

"Things were looking good. We had the momentum," said Harper coach Roger Bechtold, referring to his team's comeback in the first half after Wright had run up an 18-6 lead.

"We came back to within one at halftime, but just couldn't keep it going," he said.

The Hawks aren't the first team to be snakebit by the tiny Wright gym, a gym so small that in some spots, players can't inbound the ball with both feet out-of-bounds.

Wally Butman fouled out for the Hawks with four minutes left in the game, hurting the Hawks game down the stretch. "It's tough to lose a player as experienced as Wally that late in the game," Bechtold said.

Jim Arden led the Hawks in scoring with 21. Eleven men scored for the free substituting Wright team, led by Rick Rasper's 15 points.

The loss put the Hawks' season record at 2-9 in league play, 9-14 overall.

Rolling Meadows wins Schaumburg Dist. bowling

The Rolling Meadows High School girls bowling team Friday won the Schaumburg District and the right to go on to the state finals at Peoria next weekend.

The title was the first for Meadows and it marked the first time in the four year history of the district that Schaumburg did not win the title.

Schaumburg had a disappointing first round, finishing fifth, and could not go on to the final round Friday afternoon.

Fremd finished second in the district just ahead of Conant in third. Hoffman Estates was fourth and Schaumburg was fifth. Elk Grove was sixth.

Total pins for the top four is: Rolling Meadows (4,625), Fremd (4,379), Conant (4,373), Hoffman Estates (4,199).

Final round games and series for Rolling Meadows were: Kim Williams, 148-162-146—456, Petrice Costello 145-151-138—434, Connie Gallis 157-166-200—423, Paula Erikson 197-111-176—484, Pam Ahrens 158-145-187—490.

High game in competition was a 215 rolled by Sue Huzan of Schaumburg in the first round.

Forest preserve action heats up

Perch are primary target

Outdoors
Jim Cook
Outdoor Editor

As long as Mr. Groundhog has instilled six more weeks of winter upon us, it might provide an opportunity for ice fishermen to cash in on some of the fine fishing available at nearby forest preserve lakes.

Often overlooked for their winter sportfishing value, these pint-sized ponds are paying handsome dividends to those with patience and warm clothing.

Axehead and E. J. Beck are drawing the most attention from anglers who are willing to chop through 8-12 inches of ice for a shot at eating-sized perch and occasional trout, bass and crappie.

At the corner of Touhy Ave. and River Rd., east of the Tri-State Tollway, Axehead Lake has been a popular rainbow trout hotspot during the warm-weather months.

The target of two trout-stocking programs annually, Axehead is accumulating sizable fish population holdovers which are developing into consistent winter action, according to forest preserve district biologist Dave McGinty.

"Essentially, we're finding more fish surviving the regular season and growing and maturing into dandy catches by winter."

Stan Podraza, who has been operating Riviera Marine Bait Shop at Higgins and River Rds. in Des Plaines for 32 years, confirms the perch boom.

"They're a little larger than past years," Podraza said. "Last week we had about 50 ice fishermen out on Axehead and most all of them were catching perch in the 8-11 inch category."

Beck Lake, 2½ miles northeast of Des Plaines and just north of Central Rd., has been deemed too shallow to support a year-round trout population, according to McGinty.

"We killed the lake four years ago and restocked it with bass, bluegills and channel catfish," he said. "We didn't stock any perch, but they're thriving again. A lot of them are running 12 inches, but there have also been some taken that have gone much bigger."

Standard ice baits — spikes, mousies and wax worms — are turning the most fish when dangled from a No. 8-14 hook and 2-4 pound monofilament fishing line.

Fish are enticed by an occasional wiggle, so don't thread the bait on the hook without allowing for a little worm movement.

If you're one of the earlybirds on the lake, start about 100 feet offshore where the water is 8-12 feet deep. Don't be intimidated by weeds. They offer a constant food supply and may be concealing a well-populated fish hole.

Fish near the bottom, using a small bobber that doesn't resist a perch's nibble and a split shot weight.

Spikes, mousies and wax worms become very inactive in cold temperatures, so it might be necessary to slowly jig the bait to force attention.

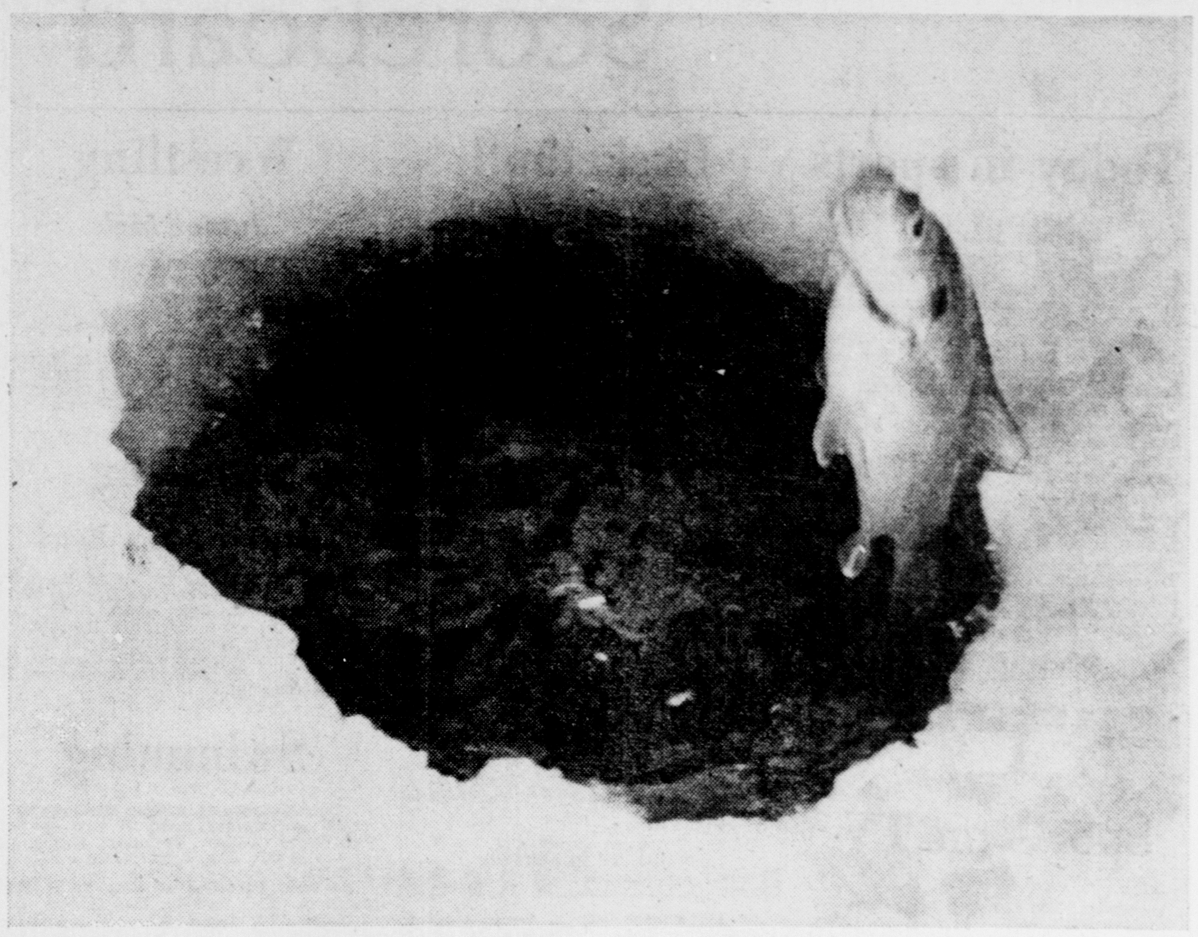
Another deadly combination is a small minnow hooked through the back by a chrome-plated, shield jig. Scrape the snow away from around the edges of the hole to allow light to penetrate the underwater area.

Anglers are reminded that Illinois fishing regulations require a valid license, no more than two poles or tip-ups with no more than two hooks (no trolley lines) on each line.

Holes cut in the ice are limited to a 12-inch diameter or less. Portable shelters are permitted, but must be removed each night.

Forest preserve district hours are from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Drives and parking areas will be plowed to accommodate fishermen.

McGinty also announced that contour maps of many of the park district lakes are now available by writing Cook County Forest Preserve District, 536 N. Harlem Ave., River Forest, Ill. 60305.



BLUEGILLS aren't exactly leaping out of the water, but ice fishing at forest preserve lakes such as Axehead and Beck are providing consistent action for cold-weather anglers. (Photo by Mike Seeling).

Clean bill of health for 'Chain'

The carp in the Chain O' Lakes region have been given a clean bill of health for commercial fishing, the Illinois Department of Conservation announced Wednesday.

Commercial fishing of the rough fish will be allowed between April 1 and October 15, and a take of between three and four million pounds is expected, said Gary Erickson, fishery biologist for the Department of Conservation.

The low levels of contaminants in the Chain O'Lakes fish is particularly good news, Erickson said, because such contaminants tend to accumulate more in scavengers like the carp than in more popular sport fish like bluegill or crappie.

"The relatively low small amounts of pesticides and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) was a pleasant surprise," said Erickson. Commercial fishing at Carlyle Lake in Clinton, Bond, and Fayette counties will not be allowed this Spring because of tests showing dangerous amounts of the agricultural pesticide Dieldrin in rough fish there.

Eighteen carp from Grass and Pistakee Lakes in the Chain were taken Dec. 22 and sent to the Illinois Department of Public Health and the U. S. Food and Drug Administration for testing.

"No more than .4 parts per million of the PCBs was found in any of the carp," Erickson said. PCBs are widely used industrial chemicals suspected of causing cancer and other health problems in humans. The FDA has set a limit of five parts per million PCBs for food consumed by humans.

Levels of dieldrin reached only .01 parts per million, while the levels of aldrin in the fish ranged between .007 and .038 parts per million, he added. Dieldrin and aldrin are both pesticides. The FDA has set 3.3 parts per million as a safety limit in food for both dieldrin and aldrin.

Erickson was unable to explain the particularly low levels of the pesticides in light of the fact that thousands of acres of farm land in Wisconsin drain into the Chain O' Lakes and Fox River.

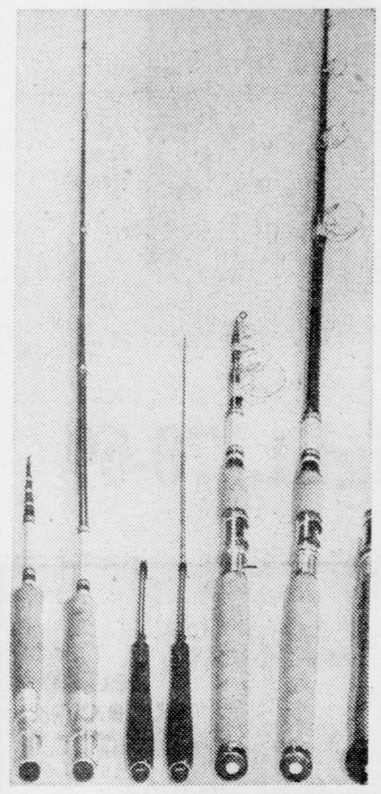
Eight commercial fishermen will be allowed to fish Grass, Pistakee, Nippersink, and Fox Lakes. Commercial fishing of the Fox River, Mineola and Stanton Bays in Fox Lake, and connecting waterways of the Chain will be prohibited, Erickson said.

Commercial fishermen will be required to obtain a license from the Department of Conservation. License holders must have at least 1000 feet of seine netting or 500 feet of trammel nets. The licenses will be granted on a first-come, first-served basis unless more than eight qualified fishermen apply. Applications will be accepted after March 1.

Fishermen will be required to possess a minimum of equipment, Erickson said, because too many amateurs became involved in commercial fishing of the Chain last year and only 4000 pounds of carp were harvested.

Many of the carp taken will be shipped live to fee-fishing areas in central and southern Illinois, Erickson predicted.

Those commercial fishermen interested in fishing the Chain O' lakes should contact the Department of Conservation's regional office at Chain O' Lakes State Park at (815) 675-2385.



PORTABLE TACKLE, such as these "Concealed Rods" manufactured by Trimarc Corp., solves anglers' worries on the road.

Telescopic fishing tackle solves traveling problems

by VIC WATIA

Anglers too often pass up prime fishing opportunities simply because conventional fishing tackle is too bulky to carry along at all times.

Problems can arise trying to take a tackle box, rod case and other accessories aboard a plane en route to a business conference or other out of town activity. And leaving a good supply of fishing tackle stored in a car is an invitation to thieves.

But, there's no reason an angler today can't be prepared to enjoy his sport at a moment's notice. Travel rods are nothing new on the market, but tackle manufacturers have gone a step further.

Now, the angler can purchase one-piece telescopic rods which can be carried in a briefcase, luggage, tacklebox, glove box or any place else that's handy for the fisherman.

Several manufacturers produce such rods in various lengths in casting, spinning, spin-fly and fly rod models. For instance, one fly rod model that extends to eight feet is only 15½ inches long when collapsed.

The new telescopic rods can be a blessing and there are several models on the market today that will do an excellent job.

Besides being handy for the traveler, the rods are compact and light enough for backpackers to carry. They also are becoming popular with campers because they take up little storage space.

A few lures, a reel and telescopic rod may be all that's needed to turn a business trip into a memorable fishing adventure if the extra time is available for a short side trip.

On a regular fishing trip, the angler can carry the telescopic rod in his tackle box for a spare in case something happens to his favorite rod.

How many times have you driven by a lake or pond and had a few minutes to try your luck, but haven't had tackle with you?

Once, while plugging a shoreline from a bass boat on Illinois' Rend Lake, a man stopped his car along Interstate 57 and walked down the bank to within shouting range.

He was dressed in a business suit, but when he found out the fish were hitting he returned to the car for his fishing tackle.

The incident wasn't the first I ran into. Last summer, when I was enjoying some pond fishing along a busy Illinois highway, a semi pulled off on the shoulder of the road. After watching me land a scarppy pound and a half bass, the driver of the truck lost no time in joining me, a telescopic casting rod in one hand a small plastic box of lures in his hip pocket.

"Mind if I join you?" he asked, extending the rod to its full length and trheading the line through the guides.

When I said I didn't, he asked "What are they hitting?"

When he didn't have a lure to match mine, he asked if I had an extra one he could borrow, assuring me he would pay for it if he lost it.

I had no objection to lending him one, especially since he was that interested in fishing.

The truck driver knew what he was doing and although he fished only about 10 minutes, he caught and released two small bass.

"Certainly breaks up my long hauls," he said before leaving. "Ten minutes of fishing gets rid of a lot of tension."

XII Winter Olympics

Asked if she was sorry to see her record go, Henning said, "No, no. If it didn't get broken I would have felt what's the matter with these kids. Anyway, I still hold the track record (42.6), so I'm not wiped off the books."

Young, a former world sprint champion in cycling as well as speed skating, wasn't dismayed by the dismal weather conditions, saying, "When I first went out for my warmup, the conditions were terrible. But by the time they resurfaced the ice, it was good for Innsbruck (not one of her favorite tracks)."

As for the race itself, the perfectionist in Sheila wasn't quite satisfied as she explained, "It wasn't a perfect race. The last 100 meters I started coming off my heels and the last time I turned it wasn't so good."

Sheila, who skates without socks because "I like to feel my toes move around and feel them against the skates," said winning an Olympic gold wasn't quite like the instant thrill she got when she set the world record last weekend at Davos, Switzerland.

"When you skate a world record it's done and that's it," she explained. "You don't have to wait around. Here it's all waiting."

If the end result is the same, Sheila will put up with a lot more of it Saturday when she attempts to do what no other American ever has. Dianne Holum, currently the U.S. women's speed skating coach, owns a total of four medals, two from 1968 and two from 1972. But no one has taken three the same year.

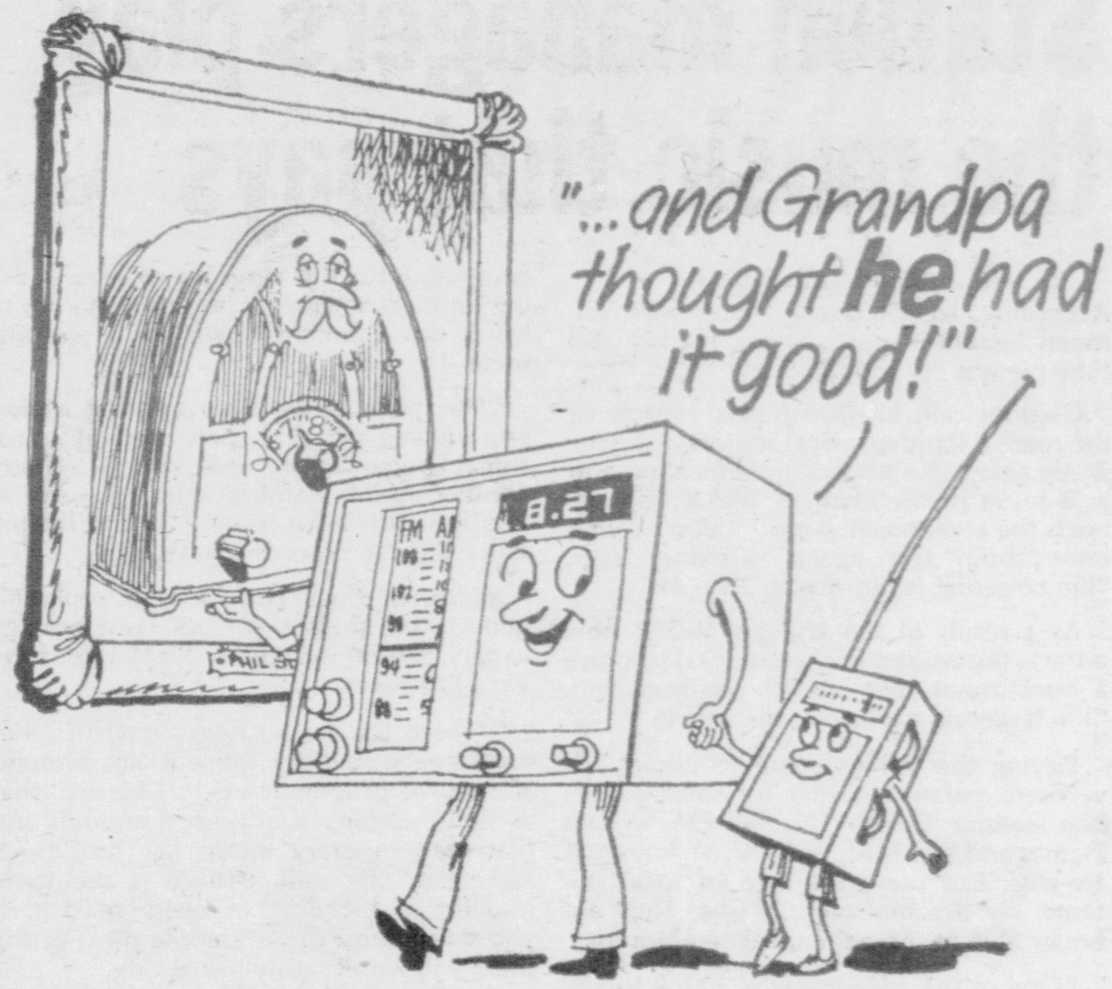
RADIO
It's Everywhere!



by Karen Blecha

Radio is on the move, on the rise, going up, making it.

Forget about reminiscing over the Golden Age of Radio when Ma, Pa and the kids sat around the Philco at night listening to Amos n' Andy and the latest episodes of The Shadlow. If that was golden, this is golder. Fact of the matter is, more people listen to radio today than ever before.

Consider these figures, compiled by the Radio Advertising Bureau:

— 98.6 per cent of all homes in the U.S. have at least one working radio. An average household has 5.6 sets;

— 45 per cent of the homes have a clock radio;

— Car radios are used 62.4 per cent of driving time;

— 75 per cent of teens, 53 per cent of adult women and 55 per cent of adult men own battery-powered radios for personal use.

And most impressive of all, there are almost twice as many radios in the U.S. than there are people.

Radio surrounds us. It wakes us up in the morning, consoles us on the way to work, keeps us company during hours alone, soothes us as we sit in the dentist's chair waiting for the drill.

Radio's got it all, say station managers. Music, news, chatter, issues, editorials — whatever you need to alleviate boredom, lonliness and keep informed.

The Chicago area has nearly 50 AM and FM stations. Big city stations offer everything from rock, pop, country to instrumental, beautiful music and news. Many of the stations are owned by giant broadcasting corporations like Westinghouse and NBC. Others are owned locally like the variety of suburban stations that exist.

No longer is there a definite distinction between AM and FM radio. Where FM stations used to be considered oases for classical music fans and high-brows you can now tune in to either band and not tell much difference. The lines of discrimination have disappeared.

Radio is radio.

"Chicago today is one of the — if not the — most exciting radio markets in the U.S.," said Charlie Warner, general manager at NBC's WMAQ. Warner is the new breed of radio man — scientific, geared to creating a station that will attract a mass audience that will in turn attract big advertisers. Warner credits his philosphy for making WMAQ country music one of the most listened to stations in Chicago.

"Chicago radio is exciting because you've got two giant contemporary stations battling it out — WLS and WCFL — and competition makes better stations," Warner said. "You've got Wally Phillips, a relative phenemonom and maybe the most successful morning man in the country. You've got WMAQ, the country's largest country music station.

"You've got ethnic, news, talk. Today's radio is like magazines. Like someone can find a magazine they want to read, they can find a radio station they want to listen to. There's that much diversity."

Today's radio is big business. Stations, live and die by their ratings. The ratings, similar to the Nielsen ratings for television, are compiled by relying on surveys of sample listeners. Small audiences do not attract big advertisers. Therefore, station managers must be on their toes to attract the largest audience possible.

Programming is the key. People need to know what to expect from a radio station. Radio is not like TV. Ask people what they watch on television and they'll give you a program like "Mary Tyler Moore Show" or "The Rookies." Ask them what they listen to on radio and they say WLS, WIND or WBBM.

"The worse thing with radio today is there is no creative sell," said Mo Gardner, vice-president and general manage of WCLR, "The Great 102 VM," in Skokie which is owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. "Everything is based on numbers and if they are reliable, it's okay. But who knows!"

If a station isn't successful, it changes its format. WCLR used to be a beautiful music station but last September changed that.

Listen and WIN!

by Jill Bettner

"Hey all you guys and gals out there in Chicago radioland — it's time to call in and WIN! Yessir, just listen for the touchtone, sing the jingle, recite the rhyme, rattle off a mouthful of CFLs and WE'RE GONNA MAKE YOU RICH!"

It's the new way, the cool way to play the radio, not for music, news or the wisecracks of some smart-mouth disc jockey — for money, man, cold hard cash. Tune in that transistor for big bucks, trips and T-shirts, belt buckles and beanies, concert tickets, records and anything else they've got laying around the station.

"Hello, m'dear, you lucky lady. I have just reached in and pulled out your postcard," the jock croons. "Think you can sing our song?"

" "Ooh, I'm so excited," she twitters. "Here goes . . . W—L—S!"

The musical call letters, fortunately blurred by telephone static, screech out over the airwaves. It's offkey, enough to curdle milk, but recognizable.

"Ah, thank you. Very nice, very nice," he lies. "For that we're going to send you . . . ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS!"

"What?" she squeals. "Are you kidding? You're kidding. I've never won anything in my whole life. I can't believe it. You're putting me on, right?"

"Wrong. You won alright and by the way, what radio station do you and all your neatest friends listen to?" the jock replies, grateful this call is almost over.

"Oh, WLS — of course!"

Of course. WLS gives away more money and more prizes than any other radio station in Chicago. Not coincidentally, Music Radio also has more listeners than anybody else.

Michael Donovan, WLS director of advertising and promotion, said the station has an estimated cumulative audience of almost 3.5 million Chi-

Station managers play the music that pays

According to Gardner, there was too much beautiful music in the market and "the pie was cut too thin."

Gardner calls his new format middle of the road, a standard vocal station with music by artists like Sinatra and Streisand and as a result of the change, WCLR now attracts the audience it wants. "I don't care a hoot about teen-agers," Gardner said. "I'm targeting my format to 25 to 49."

As a result of the change, WCLR now attracts the audience it wants. "I don't care a hoot about teen-agers," Gardner said. "I'm targeting my format to 25 to 49."

Playing the ratings game to attract advertisers makes it harder for small suburban stations like WYEN, 107 FM, in Des Plaines and WWMM, 92.7 FM, in Arlington Heights. But the advantage of local stations, say the managers, is that they are better able to serve the local community.

"One of the advantages of being locally owned is that if we find a need to change it doesn't take two months of red tape," said Ed Walters, president and general manager of "Request Radio" WYEN, one of Chicago's largest suburban stations."

Walters considers suburban radio an up and coming phenomenon. "I don't think we have a problem competing because we are successful. The Chicago stations look at us as a thorn in their side," he said. "In the past suburban radio was kind of slipshod and we've changed that. We've catered to an audience and we're doing a job."

Robert Williams, general manager at WWMM a much smaller station, has different problems. Because his station can be heard only about 18 miles from its headquarters in Arlington Heights, WWMM does not show up in the rating books.

"We must resort to a lot of sampling techniques to find what our listeners want," said Williams whose station is the only full-time jazz and big band station in the area. "We try to get the station talked about because we don't have the dollars for advertising the big stations do."

"Running a suburban radio station can be characterized as small-time radio but competing for the same set of ears as the big time broadcaster," he said. "We try to bring our thinking down to a regional focus."

"For example we have nothing against announcing projects sponsored by a national organization. But the St. Viator Mother's Club holding a bunco party to buy new warm-up jackets for the basketball team, takes precedent with us."

Radio has been criticized for programming to the masses, for not have enough variety. Station managers like Warner have a ready answer.

""There are always negative critics. I'm sure they would say there is not enough alternative programming in Chicago, that all news stations aren't good enough and that contemporary music has too much sameness," he said. "There is the same intellectual bleeding in every market. If you satisfy most of the people most of the time, you won't satisfy somebody.

"Sure we could have more intellectual, talk, public service and education, but nobody would listen. There is an absolute direct relationship between the size of the audience and the money you make," he said. "I am not interested in what a pointy head intellectual has to say about C. W. McCall's song, "Convoy," It's No. 1."

There is at least one man in the Chicago area who would disagree. For the last two years William McCarter, general manager of WTTW, Chicago's public television station, has been trying to acquire a radio property. Properties are hard to come by since all of the frequencies allotted for the Chicago area are already taken.

Channel 11 wants to acquire a companion radio station that would operate on subscriptions, grants and endowments as the television station does. There would be no advertising and the station would air educational programs, classicial music and drama, McCarter said.

"The diversity of radio here is not as strong as it should be. There is a definite need for a public station," McCarter said. "You don't have news and public affairs in depth on radio to the extent public radio would bring. We are just going to keep working on it"

Radio's gonna make you rich!

cago area listeners who tune in at least once every week. And while Donovan feels the contests and games are "just one ingredient in a recipe that has led to success for WLS," he readily admits they help the ratings.

"Last year alone, we gave away 120 trips to Disney World, 20 Chevy Monza coupes, 20 all-expense paid vacations and literally thousands of dollars, plus hundreds of steros, TVs, jewelry, digital watches — all kinds of stuff," Donovan said. "The contests are fun. People sound funny singing our jingle on the air and everybody loves to win something. It's a form of entertainment they look forward to. But let's face it, people listen to us mainly because we play the best music — the music they want to hear."

Maybe, but Donovan also concedes that WLS commands the largest audience because Channel 89 is the clearest Chicago radio signal. That means the dulcet tones of Bob Sirott (the B.S. Love Counselor), Fred Winston and other personalities reach more ears — in as many as 32 states.

Most of those ears are on either side of faces with adolescent complexion problems. WLS is number one with the teeny bopper crowd and currently way ahead of Chicago's other big rock station, WCFL, in the ratings race.

Super CFL plays the same music and is even running a smiliar contest right now. Their "Say It and Win" contest also sounds pretty funny on the air. Another postcard drawing, lucky winners get a chance to mumble CFL, CFL, CFL as many times as they can get it out in five seconds. Every CFL is worth $10.

The station also just opened the "M&M Super-CFL School Spirit Contest." The lucky junior high or high school that sends in the most wrappers from Mars candy products (or reasonable facsimiles) wins a KISS ("Hot, Hot, Hotter than Hell") concert and a $1,000 scholarship.

Ah, anything to bolster that listening audience. Some station managers say they run contests for "listener involvement" or because they enjoy making people happy, but the truth is that it all comes down to the magic bottom line. The more listeners, the more advertisers.

"You do what you have to to try to keep your audience or build it up," said Charlie Warner, WMAQ station manager. "The contests are particularly good if a station is trying to make a name for itself or build a new image — it's just one way to do it."

Warner speaks from experience. The "WMAQ's Gonna Make You Rich" contest paid off handsomely for the station as well as its listeners until the Federal Communications Commission began considering legislation to ban so-called "Don't say hello" campaigns. The rules of the contest, now known as "Cash Call" were changed to require participants only to know how much money is in the "jackpot."

Although it's hard to run in the same league with the big Chicago stations, the smaller ones do as much as they can to appeal to listeners with fun and games too.

"We find it very difficult to compete dollarwise with promotion of other stations," said Ed Walters, president and general manager of WYEN-FM in Des Plaines.

You may not be able to go to Las Vegas with what you can win by listening to WYEN, but you could go out for dinner. The station runs trivia contests four times a day with prizes such as dinners for two or T-shirts.

Nearly all radio giveaways come from station advertisers.

"Most of us work on a trade agreement basis — it's like one hand scratching the other," said Joan Kale, promotion director at WFYR "FYR Radio."

"We do for them by putting their name on the air and they do for us by providing the prizes for us to give away. It's good for the merchandiser and it's good for the radio station," she continued. "I think radio stations have to be promotion-minded. No matter how crazy or silly the prize, people seem to like games very much."

In fact, there are some people who really go bananas over radio contests. When WFYR ran its "Visible Vault" promotion a few weeks ago, Kale said she kept seeing the same people who had listened for clues to figure out where the vaults would be each day as they were moved from store to store throughout the Chicago area.

"It was ridiculous," she marveled. "It got to be like old home week — the very same people would show up in a store on the south side and the next day, there they'd be on the north side. I'm sure there must be lots of people that kind of go overboard with these games."

Her comments conjure up visions of a real die-hard contest fanatic sitting there in front of the radio, pencil and paper at the ready, almanacs and encyclopedias stacked high and one hand poised over a multi-line telephone.

Monday, morning, 5:30 a.m., he gets up with Wally Phillips. Flipping madly through the almanacs in search of the answer to one of Wally's trivia questions, he punches buttons on his phone at busy signals until he finally gets through to WGN and starts the day by winning dinner for two and a case of cough medicine.

After lunch, might as well call up smart-mouth Lujack and take a crack at copping a couple of free concert tickets, he says to himself. Then maybe I'll tune in WCLR and listen for — what? Oh, yeah, a jet blast, to get into that Great Escape Contest. A couple of weeks in Hawaii wouldn't be bad . . .

WGN special features Italian immigrants

"The Italians," fourth in the "Destination America" documentary series, will be shown on Channel 9 at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Filmed in Italy and San Francisco, the episode accounts early experience of Italian immigrants, the difficulties they overcame in adapting their culture and traditions to American ways and their struggle to find acceptance in the New World.

The "Destination America" series will continue with five additional segments which present America, a nation of immigrants, as seen through the eyes, experience, and memories of the American people. Among the groups to be depicted are the Germans, Norwegians, Jews and British. The final segment will explore the new "immigrants" to the cities—the blacks, Puerto Ricans, and Mexicans, as well as the young Americans who are now trying to return to their roots and rediscover the ways of their ancestors.

This major series was produced for America's Bicentennial celebration by Thames Television of Great Britain, creators of "Jennie" and "World at War."

Community history workshops planned by Newberry Library

Chicago's Newberry Library and the Chicago Historical Society are planning a series of workshops on community history in the Midwest, designed for individuals who are active in historical programs in their communities.

Supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the workshops are intended to help participants develop new skills in historical investigation and to discuss a wide range of sources and possible approaches for such study.

Eight workshops will be conducted over a 15 month period. Topics covered include the people of the community, the family in community, the physical community and community politics, institutions and economic life.

Two workshops designed primarily for people in the Chicago area will be conducted on five successive Saturdays starting March 6 and Oct. 16. All workshops will be at the library, 60 W. Walton Pl., and the historical society, North and Clark Streets.

Six other workshops, open to people from throughout the Midwest, will run for one week each Monday through Saturday starting May 10, Aug. 16, Sept. 27 and Nov. 15 and Jan. 17 and Feb. 21, 1977.

Workshops are limited to a maximum of 25 people. All are free and study materials will be provided. Those interested in attending should contact Mark Friedberger for an application at 943-9090, ext. 228.

Post Road traveled by Abe Lincoln subject of new commemorative

An envelope commemorating Illinois New Salem-Springfield Post Road traveled by Abraham Lincoln as a prairie-lawyer and politician is now available.

The collector's envelopes will be carried over the old route Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday, and given a special cancellation date on that date only. In addition to the artistic cachet, designed by noted Lincoln artist Lloyd Ostendorf, a first-day postmark will depict young Lincoln sorting mail in front of the New Salem Post Office where he served as postmaster. Lincoln lived in New Salem from 1831 to 1837.

Gov. Daniel Walker has designated Feb. 12 as Lincoln Post Road Day in Illinois to commemorate the permanent marking of the historic route between New Salem, Athens and Springfield. As a surveyor, Lincoln in 1834 laid out several miles of the road.

Envelopes are being sold as a set of three to the public for $1.50, or $2 for three non-addressed envelopes mailed under a protective cover. To order contact Lincoln Post Road Envelopes, Box 9, Athens, Ill. 62613.

Rules and official entry forms are available from World of Poetry, 801 Portola Dr., Dept. 211, San Francisco, Calif. 94127. Contest closes March 31.

Woodfield hosts exhibit

LeRoy Neiman's paintings and serigraphs are on display at Woodfield Shopping Mall in Schaumburg starting Thursday. More than 40 works by the artist are exhibited in the Grand Court of the shopping center, Golf Rd. and Rte. 53.

Neiman looks for the essence of people, he says. He finds many at sports events, others in a multitude of settings — casinos, hotels, bars, massage parlors, steam baths, elegant restaurants, battlefields, law courts, pool room,s luxury liners and skid row missions.

Neiman, a graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago and a faculty member there for 10 years, has had numerous exhibitions at galleries including National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution, the Salon d'Art Moderne in Paris, the Huntington Hartford Gallery of Modern Art in New York, and the Gallery Fiorentina d'Arte in Florence.

WTTW schedules week of Deanna Durbin films

Deanna Durbin, who sang and danced her way through "sentimental" movies in the 1930s and 1940s, will return to the screen when Channel 11 airs five of her early films starting Monday at 10:30 p.m.

"Three Smart Girls," "100 Men and a Girl," "Mad About Music," "That Certain Age," and "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" will be shown through Friday.

The movies are being aired thanks to a Zelda Eisenstein, of Chicago, who since 1971 has contacted Chicago television stations requesting the airing of old Durbin films. She started collecting signatures on petitions to prove there really are Deanna Durbin fans and contacted Channel 11 which obtained the films.

Stamps feature state flags

The U.S. Postal Service will follow a different first day cancellation procedure for the Feb. 23 release of 50 commemorative stamps honoring the flag of each state.

For this issue only, collectors must purchase the stamps and affix them to their self-addressed covers, then send them (in another envelope) to Washington, D.C. where the first day cancellation will be applied.

Post offices in state capitals will also apply a special cancellation to covers sent with flag stamps affixed. That cancellation will read "50 States — One Nation/USA Bicentennial."

Stamp notes

by Bernadine M. Rechner

Stamps may be affixed on your covers in any combination and there is no charge for the cancellation service.

Postal clerks have been instructed not to honor purchase requests for specific state flag stamps so collectors must accept random stamps bought in small quantities or purchase an entire sheet of 50 adhesives.

Collectors desiring a first day cancellation on a sheet of stamps may purchase it through the Philatelic Sales Division where the sheet will be mounted on a large white envelope and canceled with 14 bull's eye cancellations and one first day of issue cancellation. Charge for this service is $6.50 (the cost of the sheet of stamps); the handling charge has been waived. Send your request to "50 Flag Sheet, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265."

Address your request for first day cancellations on standard covers to "50 Flags, Postmaster, Washington, D.C. 20013." Requests will be honored through March 9.

Collectors desiring state capital cancellations should send their covers to "50 Flags Cancellation" in care of the Postmaster at the following addresses only:

Holbrook's played Twain since 1948

c Hal Holbrook's portrayal of Mark Twain places a weight on the actor far heavier than the responsibility to entertain. The show has made Holbrook the custodian of perhaps America's best-loved literary legend.

Holbrook's stage presentations of "Mark Twain Tonight" provide for many their last encounter with Twain's thoughts and personality since perhaps a childhood reading of "Hickleberry Finn."

"When I first started doing this show, I remember it was intimidating to think of the weight," Holbrook said. "When I began, I was in it in such a small way that nobody was making any waves about me.

"When the thing got to be very successful, I was aware of what was taking place. All I could do was to do him the way I think he would like.

"I have to interpret Twain with my head and my heart. Just as you would read him and get your own ideas," Holbrook said, "I have to leave it up to the intelligence and imagination of people to determine whether it's acceptable or not."

The show has surely been acceptable. Holbrook has made a living doing Twain since 1948 when he was part of a two-person show in which he portrayed Twain and five other characters.

"I didn't know anything about Twain. I had to read just to find out the most superficial things, and in reading about him I became very interested," Holbrook said.

To do the show alone, Holbrook knew "I had to develop an entire evening of Twain. The only way I knew to do it was to read everything he wrote. It was just a long job of sifting."

"There has been a rather enormous editing job done on the material to bring it into present focus. I select — and I have to take the responsibility for that," he said.

In the early years, said Holbrook, "I was trying to squeeze into this person, creating physical things, a walk, a voice, arm movements, everything. I was mechanical.

"Then there comes a time when you hit up against a wall. It's a click, a relaxing, when you release your own energies, your own personality, your thoughts, your feelings. That is when the character takes on life.

Yet, Holbrook said that regardless of his research and effort he believes Twain would be appalled with "Mark Twain Tonight."

"I don't think he would be pleased with anybody doing him," Holbrook said. "I think he would say, 'What does that jerk think he is doing? Good Lord, I was no more like that than the man in and the moon' and Twain would resent the money I'm making.

"I think the thing that would probably please Twain is that he is still a new author to some people. That he is regarded as something to discover. That he said things that, in a sense, could have been said about today.

"And the fact that the estate was still making royalties would please him most of all."

Singer John Davidson to star in NBC musical-variety series

Singer John Davidson will star in a "new look" musical-variety series to be aired on NBC during the spring and summer of this year.

The series is scheduled to premiere in late May. The show will be structured around Davidson's new nightclub act, which combines song with comedy. The new shows will create a club-like atmosphere.

The 34-year-old Davidson starred in a series for NBC in 1966 on "The Kraft Summer Music Hall." In 1973 he co-starred in the comedy series, "The Girl With Something Extra." He has also appeared in movies including Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire."

Production for the Davidson specials will begin in Burbank in mid-April.

Weary Willie

Emmett Kelly won't give up clowning

Weary Willie, the sad and silent clown, won't give up.

"I have to keep hollering and yelling that just because I live in Florida doesn't mean I've given up and retired," says Emmett Kelly Sr., one of the world's most famous circus clowns for half a century. "I'll give up when I have to."

Emmett Kelly, the longtime star of "The Greatest Show on Earth," is 77 and still wearing greasepaint.

Though it's been years since he performed under the big top with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey circus, Kelly is still booking nightclubs and guest appearances on television, filming commercials and promoting a children's coloring book.

"I just got back from taping a Carol Burnett show, and this summer I go back to John Ascuga's Nugget in Reno," he said. "Red Skelton and I will share the billing for three weeks beginning July 6."

But Kelly — sometimes confused with his son, Emmett Kelly Jr., 50, who copied his father's makeup — admits, "I don't try to work around the clock anymore. I just take the dates that sound good to me."

He lives in a modest white house on Sarasota's quiet South Drive with his second wife, Evie, an attractive blonde who was one of the four Gehardt sisters, an act Ringling found in Germany.

He likes to "piddle-paddle around" among his backyard orange trees, rummage through the mementos cluttering his paneled den, and sip an occasional bottle of cold German beer.

They have two daughters, Stasia, 20, who is studying mass communications at the University of South Florida, and Monika, 18, who is studying drama at a New York playhouse.

His other son by a previous marriage, Thomas Patrick Kelly, 40, also became a clown, playing fairs in the midwest.

Three years ago Kelly was honored as the king of the clowns in ceremonies at the Ringling Museum of the Circus in Sarasota, which has a special display featuring his career.

"They connect me with the circus," he says. "Well, God bless the circus, because it was good to me. But I left the circus in 1956 so I could be with my family more, and I haven't been back since."

'I haven't heard Bob Del Giorno, but I like WIND's crisp kind of sound'

-Wally Phillips

Bob Del Giorno

Chicagolan mornin

by Toni Ginnetti

Moments tick away in the small, glass-enclosed room as the commercial plays. Thirty seconds left and suddenly the man behind the black, imposing microphone abruptly turns from the conversation and lunges for an index file.

"We need a song!" he blurts, flipping through the card file of song titles. "Give me J-7, Gus," he calls through an intercom to the audio engineer.

And with hardly another breath he turns back casually to the conversation, unruffled, humming the final strains of the jingle and waiting for the "on-the-air" cue — with all of five seconds to spare.

No sweat.

Bob Del Giorno does it every morning over the airwaves of WIND radio.

It's not that he's a poor planner, mind you, or that this disc jockey doesn't have his show under control. That's just the way things go when split-second timing is involved.

"You have to think fast," says WIND executive producer Mike Fischer. "You have to plan in 1½ minutes, and that's a long time."

It's a fast pace, all right, but to those sleepy Chicagoans who tune in to the 560 frequency each weekday morning between 5:30 and 10, there's hardly a hint of confusion or rush.

Credit one amiable, energetic radio host for that.

Spontanaity is an essential ingredient to Del Giorno's show. And after two years at the morning mike for WIND, the affable, 37-year-old disc jockey has garnered a faithful following and a comfortable niche in the ratings.

"When I started the show we were running fifth in the market," Del Giorno says. "Within two years we have risen to a tight third and fourth. That's excellent growth.

"People get into a habit in the morning. We've taken some surveys and have found there are a lot of people who just listen to radio in the morning."

Planning for the show, Del Giorno admits, is something that is done on the spot, a half hour at a time. A caller will ask Del Giorno a question, triggering a topic for the show.

Or he'll find an offbeat news item among the morning newspaper clippings on his desk and quiz his listeners for comments.

Mixed in each hour are a half dozen Top 40 hits, visits with sports announcer Jim Durham, weatherman Earl Finckle and word on the weather and traffic — the bread-and-butter of morning radio.

There's a relaxed atmosphere in the little studio during this precision-timing pace. The dark-haired, smiling host screens all his calls and keeps things moving smoothly during the show.

Between the activity come off-the-air, good-natured jibes aimed at long-time engineer Gus Zavodny and producer Fischer, always punctuated with the unmistakable hand flourishes of an Italian-American from Syracuse, New York.

It's entertaining, to be sure, but Del Giorno never forgets the essential of his job — to inform.

"Mornings are important to the people out there," Fischer says. "They want to know what's happened while they've been asleep. You have to get the kids off to school, dad to work, and like today, the sun's out," he says pointing out the window. "The sun hasn't been out in I don't know how long, but it's 9 degrees out. You have to tell people that."

"Morning shows focus on getting out information," Del Giorno adds. "At night you're basically playing music. In the morning, music is secondary. In the morning you're promoting information. We try to retain a balance between them.

"I play about six songs an hour. We try to have a little bit of everything and put it together so it's not a rushed hodge podge."

Of course, the morning can occasionally bring its mini-crises. Like today.

"Oh, oh, we've got a problem," Del Giorno announces as the hour approaches 9 a.m. "Do you want to be a minute and a half early :for the news break) or a minute and a half late?

"No wait, I know what we'll do. Gus, give me J-5. I've got a lead-in for it. No, no, no, wait, I've changed my mind. Forget that, I know what I'll do."

And the crisis is resolved as Del Giorno decides to use conversation instead of a song to fill the time lag — all before his staff has a chance to get in a word.

"It's a three-ring circus," Fischer admits. "There is so much going on in the mornings."

But the tempo of the morning pace slows as the final hour nears. It's 9:35 a.m. now and Del Giorno scans his material for final traffic and weather reports and songs he will use in the last half hour.

"This is when I start loafin'," he offers, reaching for one of several fileboxes of song titles. "It's not that the morning gets long, it's by this time we're just about finished with things. It's more like trying to come down heading for 10 a.m.

"I like to feature something with music

d's favorite g men

by Luisa Ginnetti

It is 5 a.m. in Chicago and Studio A at WGN Continental Broadcasting Co. is bustling with activity. While most of Chicagoland sleeps, engineers in the WGN control room are lining up program logs, editing news wire copy and organizing commercial tapes and spot announcements.

Inside the spacious brown and orange studio, record turner Fred Keller gets ready to sit behind the circular table where he will play recorded commercials at designated times for the next 4½ hours.

As the two large lighted clocks in back of Keller approach the 5:30 a.m. mark, a casually dressed, middle-aged yet mod-styled man enters the studio. He takes a seat across from Keller.

He puts on the earphone which will connect him with dozens of avid callers, checks to be sure the reference material strewn beside him is within reach and flips the switch of his microphone to the "on" position.

As the news broadcast in the enclosed booth in front of him concludes, the "on the air" light between the clocks brightens and producer Marilyn Miller gives him a cue.

Wally Phillips, Chicago's master of morning radio, is ready to begin his daily sojourn with millions of faithful listeners.

For Phillips, whose melodic, soft-toned voice is for many as much a part of breakfast as bacon and eggs, the work routine has become ritual. But even after eight years of Chicago morning radio supremacy, Phillips and his crew are anything but blase about their jobs.

Miller, 31, has been Phillips' producer for five years. She occupies one of two seats in the control room and spends most of air time screening calls from listeners and placing calls to personalities who Phillips talks to during the show.

Today she will call Chicago Tribune sports columnist Rick Tally, a regular Phillips guest, who is in Florida for the annual winter baseball owners meeting. Another call to then almost-owner of the Chicago White Sox, Bill Veeck, will put Tally, Veeck and Phillips in a three-way phone conversation to give listeners the latest news on the impending sale of the Sox to Veeck.

The number of callers each day varies, Miller says, depending on how many trivia contests Phillips throws out for his audience and the caliber of the day's news.

It is Miller's job to screen calls and place listeners on hold as they wait their turns to talk to the morning madcap. And if Phillips seems to know all his callers personally, it's only because part of Miller's job is to hold up a sign in the control room window with the caller's name.

Miller assesses her boss' talents in one word — genius — and says the early bird shift doesn't bother her. "I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't enjoy it," the former high school English teacher says.

Seated to Miller's right is John Bobere, one of four engineers who works during the show. As a rule Bobere shares his duties, one hour each, with Jim Wirth, Skip Brezinski and Bob Broz. Broz is ill today, however, so Bobere and the others will each work an extra half hour to pick up the slack.

Switching engineers each hour helps keep them fresh, Bobere explains, and fresh is an important element for the Phillips's show. As Phillips stalwarts know, Wally likes to intersperse the program with taped cliches and sound effects and it is the engineer's job to make sure the right tape is played at the exact moment it is needed to achieve the full comic effect.

Practice makes perfect and these engineers rarely goof. Each can reach for some of the more commonly used tapes and select the right one from literally hundreds which are stacked in the control room without even taking a side glance.

The activity in the control room is a direct contrast to the hush which prevails in the studio where Phillips casts his spellbinding appeal across the airwaves. He is never caught off-guard by a caller or his crew.

The most striking thing a visitor can sense almost immediately when entering the studio is that Phillips is constantly thinking. Thinking about his next trivia question, thinking about a funny introduction to a commercial, thinking about the next comic tape to use, thinking about a history event of the day — and yet never really stopping to think about these things at all. They come naturally to a man with his experience.

Conversation seems effortless for Phillips while on the air and he keeps up a steady flow of it throughout the program. Because he rarely plays music on his show, Phillips must be prepared to carry the full weight of entertaining his listeners by giving them an endless flood of information.

He keeps a generous supply of reference materials at his disposal including a trivia folder which contains worn-out newspaper clippings and magazine articles, paperback books on various topics, a dictionary, two hardback books on movies and show business and the morning newspapers.

And if he doesn't have an answer to a listener's question about the name of an old cigarette brand no longer on the market, he knows he won't have to wait long

Rogers prefers top billing

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Wayne Rogers becomes one of the few actors to star in two separate series within a year with his new show, "City of Angels," which premiered last week.

Rogers, who costarred with Alan Alda as Trapper John in "M-A-S-H," quit the popular show at the end of last season in dispute over scripts.

The rangy, curly haired Rogers is not content to play second banana. Alda was getting the lion's share of the "M-A-S-H" action.

Rogers now plays Jake Axminster, a Los Angeles private eye circa 1934 when gambling was wide open and some of the cops corrupt.

Rogers, a native Alabamian and a Princeton graduate, has no costars this time. "M-A-S-H," with its large cast, put little pressure on him. "City of Angels" will succeed or fail on his personal appeal.

The added responsibility is fine with Rogers but he knows everything depends on the scripts.

"We're in a big rush to get some stories ready in time," he said.

"They're trying something new. Our first show has been broken up into three separate episodes at weekly intervals. I don't know if it's a good idea.

"I've been working with the producers on the scripts and consulting them about casting and directors. It's a lot more work than 'M-A-S-H.'

"But I have absolutely no regrets about leaving 'M-A-S-H' except for the cast. They were all good friends and I miss seeing them. In 'City of Angels' we will depend on guest stars each week. Jake Axminster will have a secretary, but that's about it."

Rogers was asked how he expects to succeed with yet another crime fighter when television is overrun with cops and detectives.

"First of all, Jake is no crusader," Rogers said. "He's a guy with a sense of humor who is down and out financially. He owns only two suits. Even his car is repossessed.

"He's successful with the ladies but he can't maintain a relationship longer than a day or two.

"We're trying to avoid the shoot-outs and chase scene cliches. The show doesn't resolve all its puzzles with squealing tires.

"It's not in me to play the kind of private eye Dick Powell used to do in movies. I'm trying to play the character with the same cynicism and humor that Bogart had in films like 'Casablanca.'

WAYNE ROGERS

"It's a lot tougher to carry a show alone, but if it's written well and the stories are interesting the show will go. Otherwise, I'm not going to worry about it."

Rogers has an almost cavalier attitude toward the new NBC-TV series. He has several other projects going full blast. In April he will star in Al — The Godfather — Ruddy's new movie, "Matilda."

Moreover, Rogers is a financial wizard who handles the business affairs of James Caan, Peter Falk and Jack Webb among others.

He has large real estate investments, a vineyard in central California, a computer company and several oil wells pumping in his interest.

"No one can foresee whether a series is going to catch on with the public," Rogers said. "I've told NBC, the producers and Universal Studios I can get in the car and drive away if things don't look good.

"And I mean it. There's no sense beginning a project like this unless you're confident it will be your best effort.

"I'm not as energetic as Bobby Blake on 'Baretta.' I can't help write all the scripts, supervise the directors and all the rest. Life is too short.

"My job is to make Jake as believable as possible. We'll give him puzzles to solve and hope the audience sticks around long enough to see him untangle things."

NBC hopes to laugh its troubles away

by Joan Hanauer

NBC hopes to laugh its troubles away next fall with a big batch of new half-hour comedies.

For spice, there will be variety shows, and special offerings will range from "Life Goes to the Movies" as a three-hour one-shot to "The Life of Jesus" in six hour-long segments, to wind up Easter Sunday, 1977.

The cast of "Jesus" includes Laurance Olivier, Ralph Richardson, Anne Bancroft, James Mason, Rod Steiger, Peter O'Toole, Christopher Plummer, James Earl Jones, Stacy Keach and many more. British actor Robert Powell will portray Jesus.

Surely the resemblance between "Life Goes to the Movies" the CBS three hour winner of this year, "That's Entertainment," is a coincidence.

Then there's the drama about Amelia Earhart, starring Susan Clark in the title role. She's the actress who was a hit in this season's "Babe," the CBS drama on Babe Didrikson Zaharias.

What could be really exciting is the series of two-hour dramas by major American playwrights that NBC will put on television, with Lord Olivier as creative and artistic directior, as well as actor if the mood and part strike his fancy and if his health permits.

An odd note is that Granada Television, an independent British producing firm, will film the to-be-announced dramas in England, even though the playwrights will be the likes of Eugene O'Neill and Tennessee Williams.

Specials are grand for prestige, to fill in holes in the schedule and occasionally to clobber the opposition by stacking a blockbuster against his cops and car chase weekly bore. But the bottom line is regular scheduling and NBC has made some changes in its development approach.

Development, in television talk, means that independent producing firms put together possible new shows, and the networks choose from among these for their new season. A large number are developed — few are chosen.

NBC executives at a recent Los Angeles news briefing for television writers, admitted that the 1975 Fall season was, to use NBC Television President Robert T. Howard's word, "disappointing" for NBC, and also for the other networks.

ABC, which did better competitively than it has for years, probably wasn't disappointed, on the average. CBS, what with "Beacon Hill" leading a series of new show flops, undoubtedly was disappointed. For NBC, the 1975 new shows were downright disastrous. And they are doing something about it.

John McMahon, NBC vice president for development, announced a four-point program for the 1976-77 season.

Point one dealt with half hour comedies — he said NBC had "16 pilots in development now as compared to a dozen for the 1975 season." He said there will be increased emphasis on variety shows, with four in development, and fewer long form or one-hour pilots —"15 for the coming season plus a couple of spinoffs, compared to 22 last year."

The comedies are not necessarily domestic, although it would seem the long form playlets are.

Included in the comedy lineup are "The Bureau," which McMahon called "an investigative bureau of the government," with a pair of agents overseen by their boss, Henry Gibson of late-lamented "Laugh-In."

"Over-And-Out" is a World War II comedy with a feminine slant, and "Roxie" will be something of a departure — a half-hour comedy about a young girl breaking into show business, with her singing and dancing written into the script.

"Ace" will be an Americanized version of Inspector Clouseau, the farcical French detective played to such perfection — and box office receipts — in the two "Pink Panther" movies. No word on casting, but if NBC can't find their own Clouseau, how about Tony Randall?

There also will be "Snip," described as "the adventures of a hairdresser who operates out of Hyannisport."

In the hour-long category, McMahon said NBC has "four possibilities in human drama, nighttime soap, whatever you want to tag it." These include "Gibbsville," one of those that didn't make it last year; "The Hancocks," about a modern middle class family living in California; "The Ullmans," about a blue collar family, and "Law and Order," taken from the successful novel, which will concentrate on the personal lives of three generations of a police family. Darren McGavin will star.

There also are four westerns in the works, two mystery-suspense anthology shows, one oceanography adventure series and a partridge in a pear tree.

Shelby Lyman on chess

One of the most endearing qualities of chess is the opportunity it gives man for heroic efforts. Each game played is a bit of history in which men strive under constraints of time and ignorance. Chess is never the mere collision of soulless machines of calculation.

At times, however, the onus to function under extreme pressure is hardly bearable. And we must suspect that the effects on the human personality are definite, if not calculable. The late C.H.O.D. Alexander quotes Albert Einstein as saying: "Master chess grips its exponent . . . so that the inner freedom and independence of even the strongest character cannot remain unaffected."

Those who were absorbed emotionally into the almost piteous struggle between Fischer and Spassky cannot but have an enduring sense of the travail to which humans subject themselves when they play chess. In the 14th game, for example, Fischer egregiously blundered on the 14th move. Spassky, his hand trembling, found the correct response and won a potentially decisive pawn. But a few moves later he made a terrible counter blunder.

As he completed that move, he became aware of what he had done. Immediately his jaw went slack, he swiveled in his chair and faced the wall.

Perhaps no match will again have the same life-death qualitites. But the just-played Karpov-Korchnoi match reminds us that pressure is endemic to world championship chess.

Two errors that made the difference were to be seen in game 14 and 16.

In Diagram 1 (from Game 16) Karpov confounds us by inexplicably trading a knight and bishop for a rook and bishop.

(Diagram 1)

BLACK

WHITE

White played BxP?

(Diagram 2)

BLACK

KORCHNOI
WHITE

White missed a win.

After the exchange, black's pieces become active, and a draw was easily achieved. Anatoly's blunder was 1. BxP?, which allowed QxN; 2. BxR, QxE, etc. He might have instead played 1. N-Q1!, which would have saved his knight and left him a clear pawn ahead. (If 1 . . . NxP, then 2, BxP!.)

The other example (Diagram 2) is harder to explain. Faced with a recapture at QB5, Korchnoi played 1. PxB? and Karpov avoided disaster by retreating his knight at N5 to B3.

If he had instead played the correct and winning 1. RxB!, the 1 . . . N-B3 would have been answered by 2. Q-B1, winning a piece.

Other tries also fail for black, i.e. . . . RxR; 2. QxN! or 1 . . . Q-R4, and 2. KR-B1! leaves the black pieces in a hopeless tangle.

Of course, investigation shows that Korchnoi was short of time in this position. But as he has come through rougher time-control situations, it is likely he will always blame himself severely for not winning this game and evening up the match.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Max Hardy of Los Angeles is both a top player and top teacher. His pupils play a lot of duplicate bridge and Max tries to show the difference between the play of the cards at rubber bridge and matchpoint duplicate.

He uses today's hand as a classic example. Whether South opens one club, one heart or the one notrump that Max teaches the final contract should be three notrump.

South wins the spade lead and looks at that nice six-card diamond suit in dummy. If he is a careless rubber bridge player, he starts to run high diamonds. East shows out on the second diamond lead. The careless player spends the next 10 minutes trying to salvage his contract and the next five complaining about bad luck.

The careful player ducks the first diamond. This would cost him a trick if the suit broke 3-2 but it would be the sort of trick rubber bridge players can afford to lose.

As for the match point players. Three notrump is such a normal contract that they should forget about the safety play. They should try to run the diamonds and wind up one down, but with an average score.

Bob always wanted to be an announcer between 9:30 and 10 a.m. that we don't have time to do earlier.

"I have a collection of Action Lines," Del Giorno boasts turning to his small corner file cabinet during one of the final commercials. The columns have been accumulating for about six months, he says proudly, and will become his encyclopedia of trivia.

"And I have a whole file on things we've done," he adds. "I have one for every holiday, too. So invariably what happens is someone calls and says 'I have a Columbus Day question for you.' I pull out my Columbus Day file and I can usually answer it."

Del Giorno volunteers that he is "a saver — I save everything." But there's a touch of conceit in his voice when he points out how he needs only one book on Chicago for his local historical reference needs.

"Wally (Phillips) has about 10 books that he needs," he smirks.

"Why did I become a disc jockey?" Bob Del Giorno repeats the question.

"Gee, nobody's ever asked me that."

It is 10:15 a.m. now. Showtime is over and Del Giorno leans back and stares out at the Michigan Avenue view before he answers.

"I don't know why. I was always intrigued by a radio. When I was a kid my brother and I used to play whiffle ball and I was always the announcer. I guess I always wanted to be a sports announcer."

The ambition led to work with Armed Forces radio during his service stint and from there the airwaves of hometown Syracuse. Seven years broadcasting in Michigan and 13 months in Fort Wayne, Ind. preceded Del Giorno's arrival to Chicago and WIND in 1970.

He hosted the station's evening program until March, 1974, when he was promoted to the morning assignment.

"The morning for radio is prime time," he says. "There is a huge audience listening in the morning and also in the 3 to 5 p.m. time, what they call the 'drive time.' The advantages of mornings are the massive audience and the fact that usually its the top job."

Morning radio in Chicago, however, has traditionally been the property of WGN's Wally Phillips, but producer Fischer says Del Giorno has done well in developing his own morning following despite the Phillips fans and rock buffs atuned to WLS.

"It's very competitive but that's the way we like it. I think we're a lot more balanced than Wally. The secret is the longer you're on, the greater following you'll develop. That's what's in Wally's favor."

The morning show has its advantages, one of the best of which is the early end to the workday. When his show is over, Del Giorno heads for his Arlington Heights home where he resides with Joan and their three sons.

"I usually try to get out of here by 10," he says. "In the summer time it's great. I can see the kids. I'm home early so we can go fishing or out on my boat."

The early timeslot is not without its drawbacks, though, not the least of which is rising daily at 4 a.m.

"You give up a lot of your family and social life," Del Giorno concedes. "I can't sleep in the daytime, and my wife knows after 7 p.m. I get grouchy and tired and she leaves me alone," he smiles. "By 7:30 p.m., I fade.

"I can see how it can ruin a marriage," he adds. "You have to have an understanding individual."

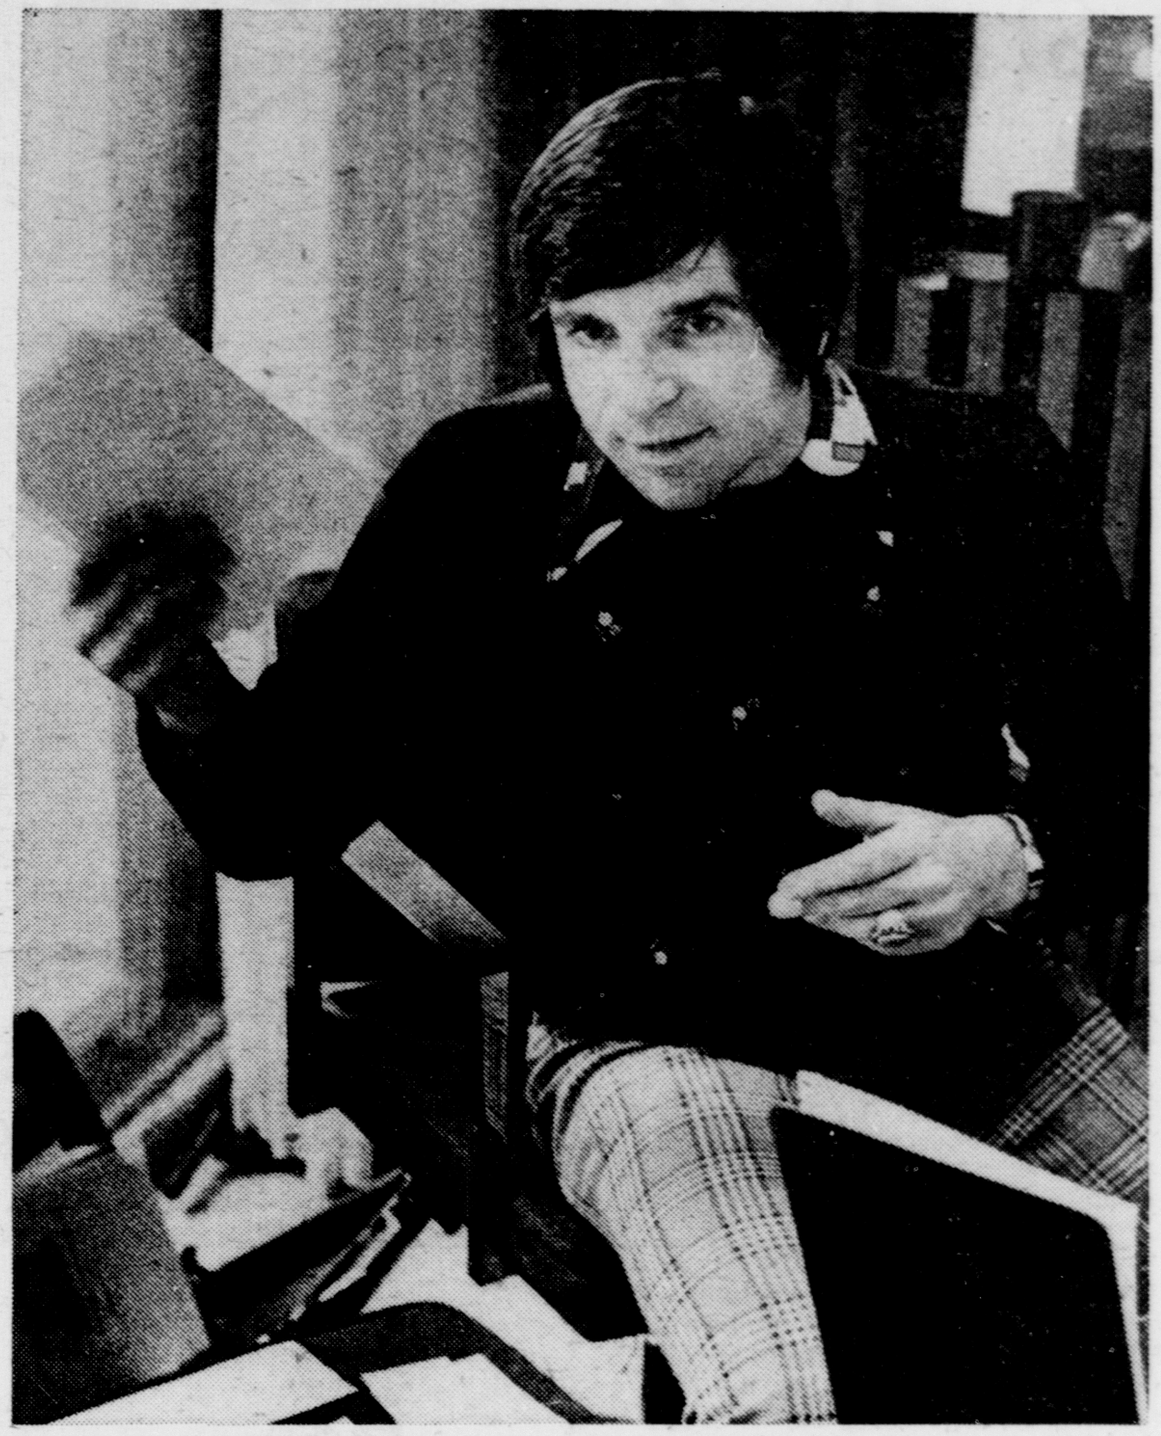
What does he think of his job?

"I like it," he says simply and laughs when he is queried on how listeners say they visualize his appearance. "They either think I'm a great big tall fellow with glasses, or a short little Italian."

And his self-evaluation?

"I'm not a Larry Lujack, I don't offend people. And I'm not Wally Phillips, so I don't get political. I'm not qualified to.

"I think my job is, number 1, getting information to the people and, number 2, to entertain them. So many people hate to get up in the morning, why not make it entertaining for them?"



Notes from the Del Giorno trivia file

Wally's career got started in Cincinnati to get the answer from one of his faithfuls. For as Phillips readily admits, his audience is his best reference source.

Surprisingly enough, Phillips says his show is never rehearsed. A review of the day's current events and a look in the history books for a possible significant event provide the extent of Wally's program planning.

"I'd rather not rehearse because rehearsing makes the show non-spontaneous," Phillips says. "I try not to make things unbearable and I try to separate myself from numbers. I like to get away from sameness."

Phillips says his easy style and manner are things he has acquired through habit and practice. "I like to think of the show as an exchange of information rather than just giving information," he says. "I like to get people off the 'me and them' thinking and I don't like performers who use the medium to try to indoctrinate people with their philosophies.

"I like humanitarian people who do things quietly," Phillips says of those he admires. "They're the biggest of all."

Phillips says he dislikes the term disc jockey and prefers to think of himself as a communicator. "I don't see why radio can't be of service and entertaining, too. I don't like radio to be formatized and I don't like phoniness."

Phillips's career in broadcasting "began on a lark" as he says. "In 1946 I had just gotten out of the service and some of my friends said they were going to enroll in a drama school in Cincinnati. I joined them and was there for about six months when the woman instructor said I should become an announcer.

"Maybe she wanted me out of the school," Phillips adds in jest, "but anyway, she said I should get into the entertainment field."

The encouragement led Phillips to send a tape to a radio station in Grand Rapids, Mich., where he was hired and worked as an announcer for about nine months. From there, Phillips went back to Cincinnati and worked as "a scared announcer" for about eight years.

Phillips came to WGN in October, 1956, when former WGN boss Ward Quaal, a friend of Phillips from Cincinnati, called and invited him to work in Chicago.

The morning radio spot did not come on a silver platter to Phillips. "I bounced around from the afternoon slot to the night slot and then late morning for awhile," he says. He got the morning job in 1958.

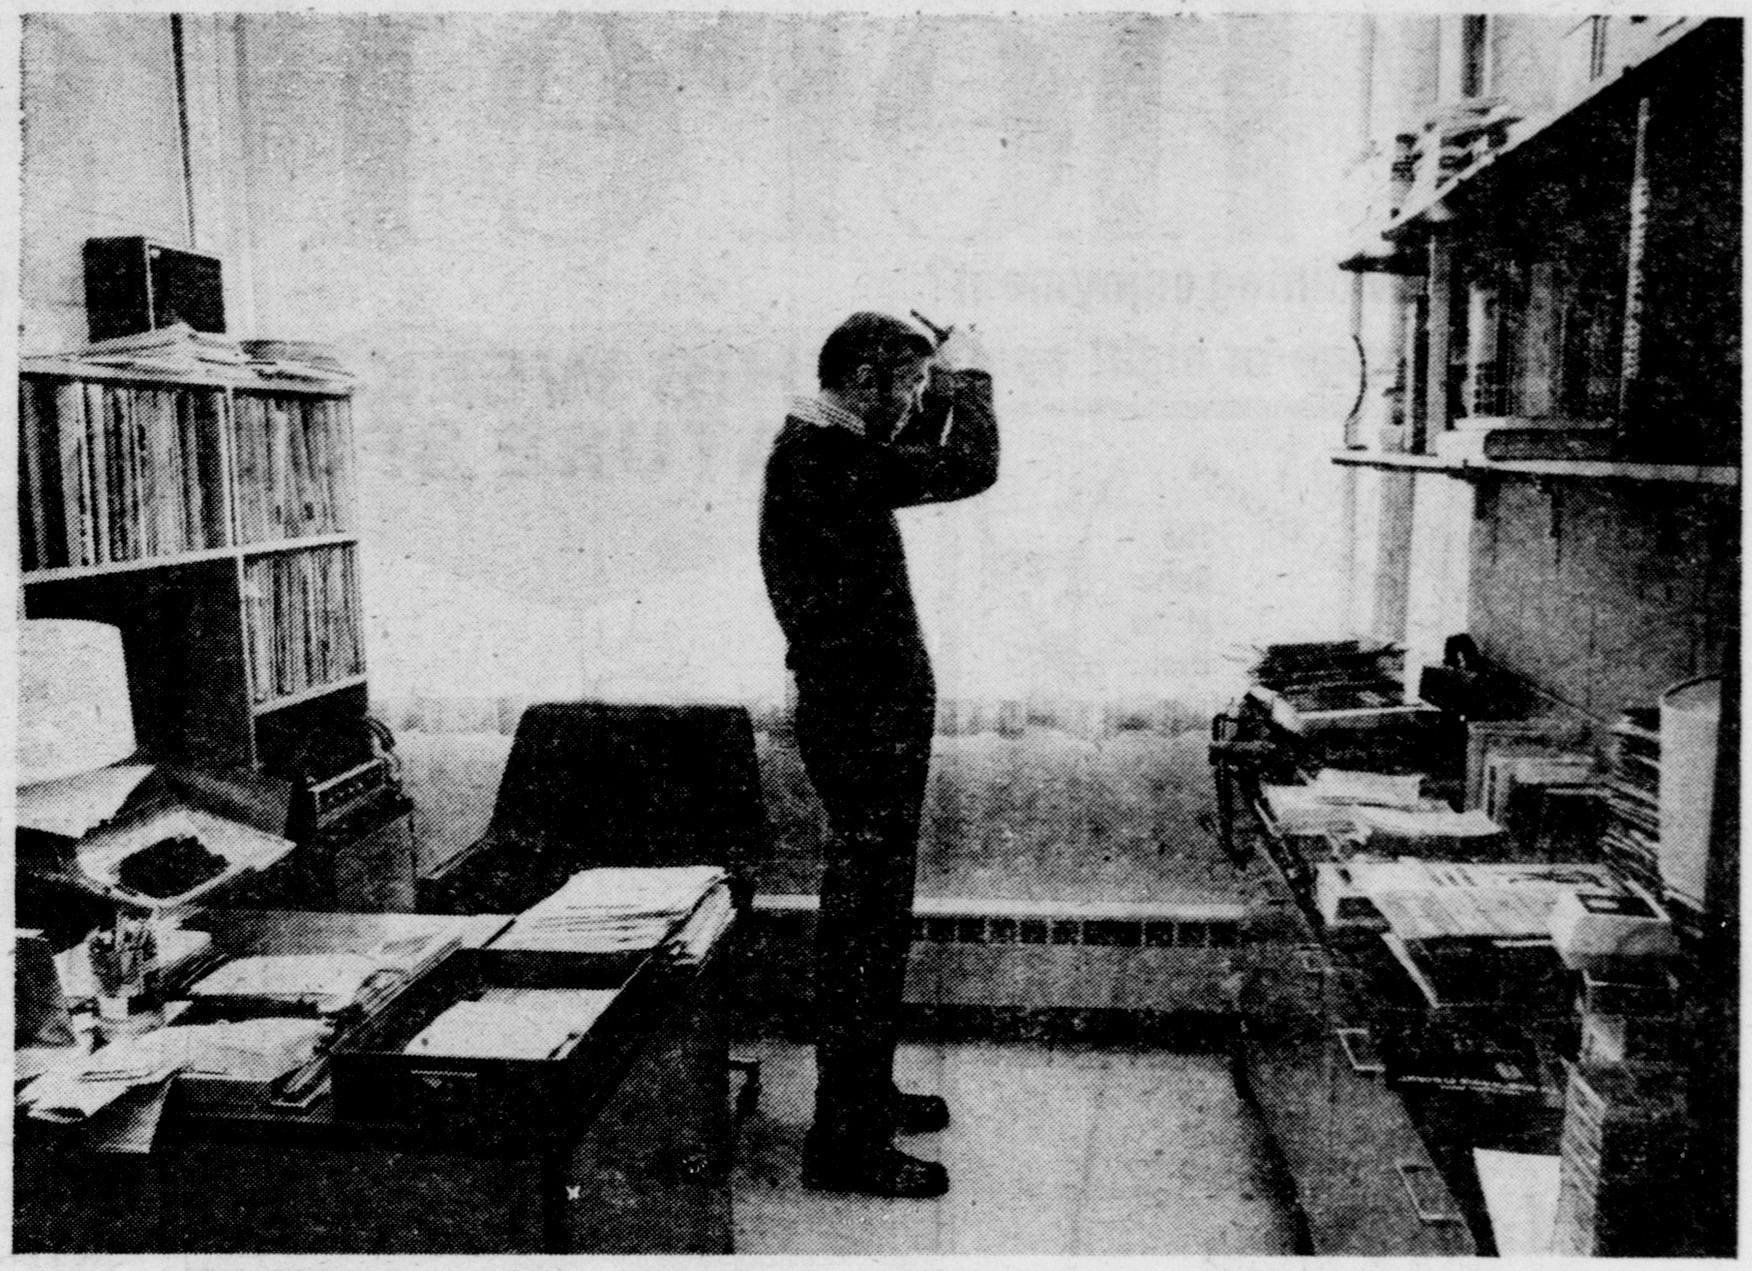
He said he doesn't mind his work schedule — up at 3:30 a.m., the drive from his home in Winnetka for breakfast at his favorite North side restaurant where he reads the two morning Chicago dailies, arrival at the station at 5 a.m. and busy work in his office answering mail and returning phone calls after the show until 2 p.m.

"I like people and this is work I like to do," he says. "I like to be quiet and I hate big press parties. I'd rather be with a few people I really like."

At the age of 50, Phillips says he plans to continue doing the show another five years or more. He jokingly adds that his age doesn't bother him because he is in the company of such notables as Johnny Carson, Mike Douglas, Merv Griffin and Sammy Davis, Jr., each of whom shares the half-century mark.

"I get into the middle of a big crowd everyday and I see the ugly but I also see the good," he says, "and I really believe people do have affection for each other."

At the very least, they have it for Wally Phillips.



Phillips takes a quick look in the mirror in his WGN office.
